Beautiful Santa Barbara Must Sea Gulls Die? Two Ills May Save Them Dr. Sansum, Wise Man

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1930, King Features Synd., Inc.

SANTA BARBARA, CALIF., Jan. 31—This is written in the Santa Barbara Biltmore Hotel, at the edge of the Pacific. High mountains in the background, palms, live oak trees and flowers all along the level shore; and under your eyes the ocean, as blue as the eyes of a Nordic baby, stretches 7000 miles across to Asia.

Hotel men from other parts should see this hotel idea, the newest, many small houses built in the Spanish mission style around a main building.

You drive from Los Angeles, about 100 miles, in two and a half hours, over a magnificent, new and perfect road.

It runs along the ocean's edge, mile after mile. The side of the mountain that comes down to the ocean's edge has been cut away, leaving a straight wall hundreds of feet high.

Entering Santa Barbara, you say to yourself that it must be about like this inside St. Peter's gate. You have passed the oil wells, pumping off-shore in the Pacific, and heaven knows how much oil there is under that ocean floor. Submarine exploration may tell us.

Within Santa Barbara, commerce seems as far away as the Antarctic. Girls drive big cars. Men strut in polo boots, well pleased with themselves.

And ducks, thousands of them, wild, swim on the lagoon, built for bird protection and breeding, thanks to Senator Clark's daughter. She gave the money.

R. G. Gerald, member of California game commission and owner of the Santa Barbara Morning Press, says sea gulls are the worst enemies of wild ducks and other wild life.

Congress, says he, should authorize and finance extermination of the millions of sea gulls in Alaska. A small bounty, and the Esquimaux would kill them off quickly.

Sea gulls destroy the eggs and young of wild ducks in their Northern breeding grounds, millions of them. They dive and devour the eggs of the salmon. Adult fish, near the spawning grounds are seen floundering aimlessly in shallow water. Easily caught, they are found to be blind, both eyes picked out by gulls, not strong enough to lift the heavy salmon.

Congress should do something about that, with two "ifs." If the gulls can be spared from their work as scavengers for the sake of ducks and salmon. And if it makes much difference whether gulls have the fun of eating the ducks as babies or men have the fun of shooting them as full grown ducks.

Herbert Fleischhacker of San Francisco, is here, looking as usual, for something more to buy. He tells you that everything will be all right with business, after two or three months of repentence. That until you have seen Del Monte you have seen nothing.

Californians are like the Italians of Dante's time. Each thinks his principality the one spot worth while. The fact is that every mile on this coast has something that is to be found nowhere else all the way from the palms in the South to the giant fir trees and roaring mountain rivers in the North, it is all a land of wonder.

But the object of this trip is still to be told. In Denver, F. R. Bonfils, who owns the Post, said, "You must see Dr. Sansum, in Santa Barbara. Nobody like him." Nine men in Los Angeles said, "You must see Dr. Sansum when you go to Santa Barbara. Nobody like him." Here, in Santa Barbara, everybody asks, "Have you seen Dr. Sansum? Nobody like him."

The writer has seen Dr. William David Sansum today and can testify that there are many doctors unlike him. He knows his business, and has added to the world's supply of medical knowledge.

His book, "The Normal Diet," published in St. Louis, by the Mosby Company, should be read by every physician, including those that, like Dr. Sansum, know their work and take it seriously.

From him you learn what it means to lack acid in the stomach. At 80 years of age, 80 per cent of men lack it entirely; at 70 years, 70 per cent lack it. Without it, no complete digestion. You learn why many are too thin, many too fat. The fat are negatively fortunate. If nature had not distributed their surplus fat in layers over their bodies and they had been compelled to eliminate it, they would be dead.

Dr. Sansum treats diabetes with a diet consisting largely of food usually forbidden. And he

SOLON SAYS DRINKER IS CRIMINAL

Liberal Puts It Up to Drys to Admit the Full Implication of Their Law

Washington, Feb. 1 (AP)—A demand that the drinker of alcoholic beverages be classed as a criminal and that prohibition enforcement agencies be directed against such persons was made in the House today by Rep. Lehlbach, Republican, New Jersey, who is a member of the wet group in Congress.

He said it is those who drink that are "essentially the ones who disregard and defy" the dry law; that the still operator, the rum runner and the bootlegger were merely abettors of the violator and the drinker was the real breaker and the criminal.

Lehlbach, a warm friend of Representative Fort, Republican, New Jersey, a dry, who yesterday declared in the House that drinking of home brew was not unlawful under the dry laws, took issue with his colleague. He said:

"It is idle to reiterate that the act of drinking is not forbidden. On 99 and 98-100ths per cent of such occasions the very presence of the beverage necessarily entailed the commission of one or more acts made felonious by the Jones Act.

FIREMAN HURT IN 'L' BLAZE

One fireman was injured and damage of $7500 caused by a two-alarm fire of undetermined origin, fought by Somerville and Charlestown firemen in the George st. yards of the Boston Elevated today.

The fire started in a one-story cement storage warehouse, located on the Somerville-Charlestown line, containing 5000 bags of cement, together with 11,200 empty bags.

Ladderman Michael Fleming of Ladder 9, Charlestown, was taken to Haymarket Relief Hospital suffering from injuries to the back, caused by a falling beam.

The blaze was discovered by Motorman Newton, who notified Supervisor J. R. Flaherty, and an alarm was sounded. District Chief Philip Tague ordered two alarms, which brought Deputy Chief Henry Powers and several pieces of apparatus from Somerville.

The fireboat John T. Dowd moved in through the drawbridge and hauling alongside a wharf 200 feet from the burning building, did considerable execution in the fight against the blaze.

ALLEN LAUDS LEGION IN WAR

"It is impossible to calculate the value of the service which you men rendered in the World War; America never can and never will forget those who made that sacrifice," said Gov. Frank G. Allen today at a luncheon in Hotel Statler to National Commander C. L. Bodenhamer. Commander Bodenhamer will be the principal speaker in the same hotel tonight at a banquet of the State Department of the American Legion.

"Our country," said Gov. Allen, "is grateful to the great body of veterans who are giving such substantial aid in the advancement of good government, who by their example and precept are impressing upon the youth of the nation the important and value of true American citizenship. Here in our Commonwealth those who gave gallant service have assumed an important part in the civic and public life of the State.

"I assure you, Commander Bodenhamer, that in no state among the 48 of this country could you receive a more hearty welcome that here in the old Bay State. Since the early days of the colonial period loyalty and patriotism have been predominant qualities in our inhabitants. Massachusetts is delighted to know it would be her pleasure to welcome and entertain the American Legion on the occasion of its annual convention this year."

Before the luncheon Commander Bodenhamer was received at the State House by Gov. Allen and at City Hall by Mayor James M. Curley.

BRITAIN KILLS ORDER FOR TWO MORE CRUISERS

Brings the Building Program Down to Number Agreed Upon With Hoover

London, Feb. 1—It was authoritatively stated today that the British government has deleted one big cruiser and one small cruiser from the 1929-1930 program which had originally called for three cruisers, one large and two small.

None of the orders for the 1929-1930 program has yet been placed.

These deletions, in addition to the cancellation of the cruisers Surrey and Northumberland from the 1928-29 program, make a total of three large and one small cruiser which had been planned but which will not be built.

This brings Great Britain's navy building program definitely down to 15 cruisers of the type in accordance with the agreement of President Hoover and Premier MacDonald.

After two weeks of maneuvering through a thicket of generalities, the conference stood today in the

Hoover Mexico Trip Delayed Until Fall

Washington, Feb. 1 (AP)—Plans made some months ago by President Hoover for a trip to Mexico City, Cuba and other islands in the Caribbean, have not been changed, but it was said at the White House today that the time still remains to be definitely fixed.

It was added that in all probability the chief executive would wait until some time in the autumn.

Lisbon, Feb. 1 (AP)—"Everybody must wear shoes" says a government decree, "because the sight of an unshod foot and leg is repulsive to many foreigners, is unhealthy and unesthetic and furthermore suggests backwardness for the country."

At St. John's hospital where all the injured were taken, Maj. Murphy was reported suffering from a possible fracture of both skull and spine, as well as severe lacerations.

Mrs. Murphy suffered broken arms, a broken leg and lacerations and possible internal injuries.

Senate Probes Phone Company's Profits

Washington, Feb. 1 (INS)—Senatorial investigators are on the trail of long rates of telephone properties throughout the country, as a key to the existence of any hidden excessive profits.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (D.) of Montana has called upon Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, to report the assessed value of telephone property, for tax purposes, in the 47 states and the District of Columbia. The net income of the telephone company in each state is to accompany these figures.

Wheeler's request followed the charge of a banker in Southwest that the telephone interests were collecting an $11,00,000 annual profit in Oklahoma property assessed by the State at only $16,

'Peppy One' in Disguise

Clara Bow Harry Richman

Clara Bow, the "It" girl of the screen, as she appeared in Boston today wearing large colored "cheaters" to keep the crowds away. And—oh yes—that's Fiance Harry Richman with her. (Staff photo.)

Clara Hides 'Come-on Eyes' With Glasses

She wore huge, dark glasses over her "come-on" eyes so her public wouldn't recognize her. She was very tired, she said, and public recognition and acclaim, when one is very tired, is probably boring.

Being apparently sincere in wit and purpose, she was not disappointed. Few recognized her.

With Harry Richman her big "it" man and her secretary, Daisy Devoe, who cut Ita Clara herself in the opinion of some, the celebrated "It" girl—"I think that's so silly," she said—departed the Hub via taxi and New York train from the Back Bay station.

NO WEDDING NEWS

During her very brief visit here with Mr. Richman, who insists he is Clara's fiance and denies vehemently that he is her husband, she consented to talk about everything but herself.

"There is no more news now about our coming marriage than there was when we arrived," she said just before boarding the train.

Mr. Richman was equally reticent. As far as Ruth Selwyn's "Nine Fifteen Revue" is concerned, "there is nothing in it for me," he said. He had thought there might be, which was the reason for his visit here. Clara came with him because he is her fiance, and Miss Devoe came, too, being Clara's secretary.

It was not made clear whether Mr. Richman had hopes or an offer, but in any event his joining Mrs. Selwyn's revue is no go.

OFF LIQUOR FOR A YEAR

Clara had intimated they might be wed right away if he didn't join the cast, but the wedding, if it takes place, will not be in Boston.

The "It" girl did say about her suit that the doctors had forbidden her to drink any liquor for a year as the result of her recent illness.

"And I intend to stick it out, private parties or no parties," she said in the House a compromise resolve providing for an investigation by the attorney-general was sent to the committee on ways and means.

In view of the fact that the committee is very busy with budget matters, it is believed a hearing on the Garrett resolve will not be reached until the week of Feb. 10.

Had Garrett been found fit and restored to duty he would have been forced to face a trial board for insubordination in failing to report injuries received at Marshfield Fair while driving a race horse.

He had previously been transferred from the headquarters liquor squad to street duty in connection with the Joy st. station. Garrett reported at the station house, but never did a day's duty, instead getting a retirement on pension.

It was during this period he was injured while driving a race horse at the Marshfield Fair.

Looks for Big Rush Into the Talkies

New York, Feb. 1 (AP)—There should be an enormous rush to horn into the talkies. Mrs. Pat Campbell, noted actress, says that 90 persons out of 100 have the ability to speak musically and up to a certain point beautifully; it is just a matter of controlling pitch and pronouncing vowels correctly.

REPORT ENDS HIS CAREER AS MEMBER OF FORCE

Retirement Board Makes a Quick Decision After Full Examination

The controversy over Oliver B. Garrett, former head of the liquor squad, was closed today as far as the Boston police department is concerned, with the report of the medical retirement board that he is unfit to return to duty.

The report based on a strenuous physical and mental examination made at City Hospital yesterday at the request of Commissioner Wilson, was made public by him.

The trio comprising the examining board are Drs. John A. Foley, Robert C. Cochrane and Arthur W. Fairbanks.

The complete report of the board, as given out by Wilson, reads:

"We, the undersigned, members of the medical board of the Boston retirement system, have today made an examination of Pensioner Oliver B. Garrett at your request. As a result of our consideration of this case and extensive examination of said pensioner, we are of the opinion that he is unfit for police duty at the present time."

Commissioner Wilson failed to elaborate on his brief statement containing the board's finding, which was not a surprise.

Garrett was retired on pension as a result of injuries received in an automobile accident about two years ago, and X-Ray plates examined by the board showed a distinct fracture of the skull.

It is understood that this fracture has never knitted properly and that there has been a constant leakage into the sinus ever since.

It is believed that today's action is the final chapter in the police career of Garrett, although under the law he may be examined at yearly intervals.

The order for the re-examination of the former head of the headquarters liquor squad, came as a surprise at a time when an effort was being made to bring about a thorough investigation of his retirement.

This effort failed in the Senate, but in the House a compromise resolve providing for an investigation by the attorney-general was sent to the committee on ways and means.

In view of the fact that the committee is very busy with budget matters, it is believed a hearing on the Garrett resolve will not be reached until the week of Feb. 10.

Had Garrett been found fit and restored to duty he would have been forced to face a trial board for insubordination in failing to report injuries received at Marshfield Fair while driving a race horse.

'BRAND DRINKER A CRIMINAL,' URGES NEW JERSEY CONGRESSMAN

MILLIONS ARE VIOLATORS, HE SAYS

Lehlbach Declares Even the Drys Do Not See Law in Its Real Light

and it possession at the time of its use is secured a crime.

Frequently it has been advocated that the buyer of liquor be made equally guilty with the seller, but as far as could be recalled at the capitol, Lehlbach is the first to advocate that whoever transports liquor should be classed as a criminal.

He asserted as he made known that the intent and purpose of the prohibition laws was to stop the purchasing of alcoholic beverages.

"The persons who strike them are essentially the ones who should guard and defend the law in regard to this subject. It is amazing to suggest that they should buy their clothing and raise food products at home. Those who manufacture and transport liquor are merely agents who enable others to violate one of prohibition to do so."

MILLIONS OF VIOLATORS

Lehlbach said that there were millions of violators of the law in every station of life, and that the still operators, rumrunners, bootleggers, and their ilk, were merely the abettors of the violators.

"The prohibitionist has chosen this proposition," he continued. "Prohibition is law, therefore whoever disregards it is a law violator, whoever breaks or helps encourage others to break other laws, being in principle only as culpable. In any event, being a law violator, he is a criminal.

"The only trouble with this proposition is that every single premise and conclusion in it is untrue.

Referring to the speech Fort, whose district in New Jersey adjoins his own, Lehlbach said:

"On yesterday we tried to see intelligent and adroit defense of prohibition, treating the subject dispassionately and free from rancor and recrimination.

"I shall endeavor to approach the subject in the same spirit. What I shall say will probably engender controversy and may involve vituperation. But facts are facts and the lessons of the history of mankind may not be gainful. Truth is inevitable and sooner or later must be faced. Let it be faced.

DIFFERS FROM FORT

Asserting the 18th amendment and acts for enforcement thereof have for their intent and purpose the prevention of the use of alcoholic stimulants as beverages, Lehlbach said he differed fundamentally from "my esteemed colleague who lays down the striking and novel proposition that the enactment about it had arisen.

"To deny it is to evade the crux of the controversy, to beg the whole question," he declared. "So when we discuss law-observance and law-defiance in connection with prohibition, let us discuss the abettors of the violators, but let's talk about the essential violator.

"There are in the country millions of men and women who habitually or occasionally are such prohibition violators without even knowing this and whoever seeks to deny it, the truth is not to him.

"My own experience differs in no respect from that of the average man who gets around, and I have seen laborers, merchants, merchants, manufacturers, professional men, bankers, judges, both State and federal, clergymen, both of the Roman Catholic and Protestant persuasions, blandly and unconcernedly ignore prohibition.

"DECENT AND RESPECTED

"These people, and the millions like them throughout the country, are decent, respected and self-respecting citizens. What is the answer?

"The answer to this situation is obvious. The prohibition statute—and the 18 amendment is simply a statute—do not square with the moral sense of an appreciable proportion of our population. Hence they disregard them. Prohibitionists themselves unconsciously endorse this course.

"When prohibition is violated in their presence they may personally deprecate it but they don't inform the enforcement authorities. Yet they, like all good citizens, would invoke justice were a person killed, a burglary committed, a child seduced, a woman raped or a dwelling house burned.

"Thus even in the consciousness of a prohibitionist the disregard of prohibition is not a crime, the violation of an accepted rule of conduct."

Wants Smedley Butler to Dry Up the United States

Washington, Feb. 1 (AP)—February today took up where January left off on prohibition. Even before the House and Senate got settled down to work, their members, or their committees, had spoken or acted in regard to the dry law.

Senator Brookhart, Republican, Iowa, in a statement said "high society had hampered Maj.-Gen. Smedley Butler in his efforts to dry up Philadelphia when the stormy marine officer was safety director of that city.

He proposed that Butler be selected as prohibition commissioner, and that Senator Smedley Butler" be named to lead enforcement forces in New York.

In the House, the appropriations committee revised one section of the Williamson bill to give the secretary of the treasury and the attorney-general joint authority in issuing regulations governing industrial alcohol.

Otherwise the measure, which would transfer the prohibition enforcement unit from the Treasury to the Justice Department, was unchange as approved earlier in the week.

In the Senate, Morris Sheppard of Texas, a Democrat, coauthor of the eighteenth amendment, said that the "love for all humanity is one of the principal forces behind prohibition movement."

The statement that I hate anyone, whether in connection with liquor, or anything else, is erroneous," he said. "I hate nobody.

Senator Copeland, Democrat, New York, said he approved of what the Texan said.

While we are in opposition on many matters with reference to the efforts made to enforce prohibition, Copeland added, "I know of no man who is so genuine in his character and in his attitude toward men in general, and the statement the senator from Texas has just made I thoroughly indorse."

President Neutral in Dry Law Fight in Congress

Washington, Feb. 1—President Hoover will maintain strict neutrality in the bitter prohibition fight that is raging in Congress, it has been stated at the White House.

The President is said to feel that responsibility now rests wholly with Congress, since he recently submitted sweeping recommendations for changes in the dry laws and said they could not be properly enforced with the existing machinery.

It was said that from time to time he will submit to Congress reports and recommendations of the Commission on Law Enforcement but does not contemplate making any further recommendations personally.

CHICAGO PLIGHT PUTS STATE IN DANGER

Governor Threatens Drast Action to Save Vets' Bonds and Illinois University

Chicago, Feb. 1 (AP)—Chicago and Cook County with empty tills had a new creditor pounding at their doors today—the State of Illinois.

When informed at a conference with taxing officials that no tax money from local governments would be forthcoming until June 1, Governor Louis L. Emmerson said the State "pinched finances and the need for money to retire bonds now due." He declared:

"Before I allow the State to repudiate its bonds, I'll call a special session of the Legislature which will have as its sole and only purpose the protection of the State from such a catastrophe."

In the meantime, $1,000,000 was added to the pledges of the citizens' rescue committee, headed by Silas H. Strawn. The money came from the Building Managers' Association, operating most of the loop property, and was subscribed to for the maintenance of police, health and fire protection and other essential public services, pending a collection of 1928 taxes.

Chicago received little encouragement from the tax parley called by Gov. Emmerson and attended by him, State Treasurer Custer, State Auditor Nelson, members of the State Tax Commission, the county board of review and Cook county officials.

Gov. Emmerson said that "the state is beginning to feel the pinch of poverty." He cited waterway and soldiers' bonus bonds now due as two needs for immediate funds, and added that "the University of Illinois finances are seriously threatened.

CHARGES A PLOT TO REINSTATE ARMSTRONG

Plymouth Selectmen's Counsel Sees "Real Decision" at Polls in March

Brockton, Feb. 1—The real decision in the case of former Police Chief John Armstrong of Plymouth will be made at the town election in March, Atty. Frank L. Simpson counsel for the selectmen, declared today.

Today's was the most heated session in the hearing on petition of Armstrong for a writ of mandamus to compel the selectmen to reinstate him.

There was a clash between Simpson and Atty. John H. Devine, counsel for Armstrong, in which Rev. William H. Osmond, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, a witness for Armstrong, was involved.

The rector testified he was provoked at the way Armstrong had been treated and said the general feeling of Plymouth people whom he had met was favorable to the ex-chief.

Under cross-examination by Simpson, witness admitted he had met perhaps only 250 persons. There are 12,500 in the town.

Another Charles J. Winkler, Jr., of Boston, who is hearing the case, asked Simpson where this line of examination was getting him, and Simpson replied:

"This petition and these days of trial are for the purpose of political capital to be used at the March election in the hope a board of selectmen can be chosen to put this petitioner back into office regardless of the outcome of this hearing."

Then there was a flareup, with Simpson, Devine and Rev. Mr. Osmond all speaking at once. It ended when Attorney Simpson was told to proceed.

Simpson asked the Rev. Mr. Osmond: "You are not altogether satisfied with enforcement of the law even in Plymouth, are you?"

"Generally speaking, I am not satisfied with the way things are going in the United States," was the reply.

Watch Out for the Old Groundhog Sunday

Tomorrow is Candlemas Day when the groundhog is popularly believed to make his famous annual debut and weather prognostication.

You remember the old legend, of course. If Brother Groundhog sees his shadow he dives hastily back into his burrow to remain six weeks. If, on the other hand, there is no shadow, the backbone of winter is broken.

To be sure no person has ever seen the groundhog, or woodchuck, as he is more commonly known hereabouts, engaged at his much-advertised pursuit, but the fallacy still persists.

The chances are Mr. Groundhog will not see his shadow tomorrow inasmuch as the weather bureau has predicted the skies will be overcast. Those who prepare to let the heater fire go out are warned not to be too precipitate, however.

Records show that the ground hog is "all wet" as a weather prophet and that as a rule more new falls of ice and snow during this month than at any other period of the winter.

According to the weather man local temperatures will rise tonight, and tomorrow, with partly cloudy conditions prevailing. The minimum temperature in Boston was 22 at 7 a. m.

SENATE PROBES A. T. & T. PROFIT

reports from nearly every community in the United States Wheeler said the totals by states would be sufficient, and declared that if such discrepancies existed they should be brought to light.

Gifford promised to try to get the material. It will be turned over to Senator Brookhart, Commerce committee, of which Wheeler is a member, and before which Gifford appeared as a witness yesterday.

A full history of the capitalization and profits of the Western Electric Company also will be submitted by Gifford, at the request of Wheeler and Chairman Couzens. The Western Electric is owned by American Telephone & Telegraph, and manufactures the equipment for that company and its network of subsidiaries.

Wheeler says he is to find out whether "exorbitant" prices are being charged these companies for equipment.

Claims that the charge was from 35 per cent to 75 per cent in addition to the cost of manufacturing the equipment were cited in Wheeler. Gifford said he thought the charge was cost plus 12 or 15 per cent, but of 75 per cent was charged that was "undoubtedly a fair figure."

Couzens favors having the manufacturing and holding-operating company activities in a single company, so there would be "no questions about accounts."

There was a wide variance in results of the two counts.

Los Angeles to Drop Another Glider

Lakehurst, N. J., Feb. 1 (INS)—So successful was the launching of a glider from the dirigible Los Angeles, that another test flight will be made soon when the big airship visits Washington, it was announced today.

Lieutenant Ralph S. Barnaby, the navy's only glider pilot, yesterday dropped from the dirigible in a glider and landed 12 minutes later.

The lieutenant declared the flight was "a cinch." He said its purpose was to determine the efficacy of gliders as means of leaving airships.

CLARA BOW OFF FOR NEW YORK

added in the video of one who knows the value of good advice.

Clara remains in New York about three weeks "just having a good time to make up for the long years we've worked. Then she will go to Hollywood to play the lead in "True to the Navy." Mr. Richman will also make a picture, he hopes.

HAS THE REDDEST HAIR

Clara has quite the reddest hair in pictures or anywhere else. It leaps out like flames from beneath her tight-fitting hats. It is very much a part of her "It."

She disdains the new long skirts and wears hers about two inches off the floor. That, of course, adds to her charms.

And then she weighs now 22 pounds less than the day she fell ill. "And I'm going to stay that way," she added. There was a time, she admitted, when her pictures showed her to be getting a little too —well, obese a little less "utter." But that's all changed.

"I'm down to 110, and there I'm going to stay," she said.

Like a visiting Englishman, she remarked upon the beauty of Boston buildings and the city's cultural aspects, before entering Mr. Richman, with the aid of a porter, slung the luggage aboard and Clara and Daisy followed.

"That Daisy must be an understudy," said one reporter.

"Overstudy was the cause of the breakdown," replied another.

The latter was discharged from the hospital after treatment.

Gagnon suffered a broken jaw and lacerations.

The accident occurred in Hollywood ave., a short distance from the school, where the car had stopped to take Miss Murphy and her chum to Boston. Skidding on the icy pavement, the automobile left the road, dropped eight feet into a swamp and overturned, crushing its occupants.

HOME IN NASHUA

The Murphy home is in Nashua. Maj. Murphy is one of New Hampshire's most prominent political figures. He served on the staff of Gov. Winant and support Gov. Tobey in the last campaign.

Recently he declined to be a gubernatorial candidate after 3000 Nashua residents had circulated a petition requesting that he do so.

Pressure of business caused his declination, he said. He is general manager of the J. F. McElwain Shoe Co. of Nashua and Concord.

presence of its first challenge of concrete reality.

The time has come, those intimately associated with the parley held, when someone soon must begin to talk in figures.

The delegations have about talked themselves out in lofty phrase and idealistic appeal, these observers commented, and now the axe is to be laid in earnest to cutting away and limiting the growth of sea armaments.

It is true the conference is not yet ready to hear proposals as to how many ships can be scrapped, or as to how many must be built.

At the present moment the problem of the conference is agreement on the physical methods of limiting war fleets. It is considering favorably a compromise plan offered by France providing a certain (as yet unstated) total tonnage to be allowed to each nation, with each of these national allotments to be divided into, tentatively, so many tons for battleships, so many for cruisers and so on through all classes of ships.

That's where the conference stands today with a few of the delegates in private consultations, but the majority of them enjoying the week-end.

Unfortunately Dr. Sansum is overrowwded with patients and can undertake no new work until after April 1, he has earliest. So do not come here expecting to see him.

Old-fashioned doctors laughed at the great Pasteur and refused to admit him to their academy of science. They would admit him now.

Doctors, open minded, will want to know of the research work that Dr. Sansum has done and is doing.

PRINCE OF WALES CATCHES COLD, CANCELS VISIT TO MINES

PLAYS GOLF WITH HIS EQUERRY

Contracted Slight Illness on a Tour of Boer War Battlefields

Johannesburg, Union of South South Africa, Feb. 1 (AP)—Illness of the Prince of Wales has forced cancellation of his trip to the diamond mines near here.

He is suffering from a slight cold contracted during a visit to the battlefields in this section.

It was stated that the Prince had an ordinary cold, with no temperature, and that his condition was not considered serious.

After rest and breakfast today he was much improved. It was expected he would benefit further during the day from the invigorating air hereabouts. He played a round of golf with his equerry, Lieut.-Col Piers.

The Prince spent yesterday at Belmont visiting the Boer war battlefields. Later he stopped at Kimberley, where he visited the diamond mines and factories.

The Prince of Wales left Southampton January 8 for Capetown, Union of South Africa, from where he planned to resume a hunting trip in the interior of Africa, interrupted last year because of the serious illness of his father.

He arrived at Capetown January 20 and was feted for several days before leaving this week for Johannesburg, whence he planned to continue on up into Portuguese East Africa.

The Prince always has been robustly healthy.

QUAKER CO-EDS REQUEST ROOM TO SMOKE IN

Swarthmore College Management Is to Vote on the Question March 14

New York, Feb. 1—Whether Quaker college maids should have a smoking room is to be decided March 14.

Definite action will be taken at that time on a petition of the Women's Student Government Association of Swarthmore College in Pennsylvania, asking for a smoking room for women students at the Quaker institution.

A formal protest against granting the petition was unanimously adopted by the New York annual meeting of the Friends, and forwarded to the board of managers.

The Friends Intelligencer, official weekly of the Hicksite Branch of the Society of Friends, says in its current issue that although the yearly meeting went on record as opposed to the proposal the question was raised whether in a society which always has stressed the equal rights of women it was inconsistent to allow the men to have a smoking room and refuse to provide one for the women.

Smith and Wellesley Have No Smoking Ban

Of Massachusetts women's colleges, Smith, at Northampton, was the first of only two to sanction smoking by students. Dormitory smoking was first allowed and in 1926, at the request of the student government association, two luxurious smoking rooms were fitted out in Albright and Gardiner dormitories.

The ban on smoking at Wellesley was not lifted until last spring. Before that the girls were forbidden to smoke while under the jurisdiction of the college. While on special rooms are set aside at Wellesley for the purpose, there is a list of campus buildings in which smoking by the students is permitted.

Mt. Holyoke College, at South Hadley, always has frowned upon smoking by its students.

Bethel College Girls Invite Men to "Dorm"

Newton, Kas., Feb. 1 (AP)—Dormitory coeds of Bethel College are betting that in this modern world where advertising and organization are everything, advertising is the more potent of the two.

Sorority girls have been winning all the desirable men. Residents of the less exclusive dormitories of the finch and the north end huddle. The result appeared in the Bethel Collegian in the form of a display advertisement inviting college men to call at the "Dorm Hangout."

By way of added attraction, the ad announced several new card games had been added to the dormitory reception room. Each man "and boys are cordially invited to come and participate in these games."

PLOT REVEALED TO FREE EXILES OF ITALY

Former Deputy Confesses to a Plan to Get Political Prisoners to France

Paris, Feb. 1 (INS)—A daring plot to deliver Italian political exiles from the Lipari Islands and bring them to France is believed to have been thwarted accidentally in the arrest of three prominent anti-Fascists on Dec. 31, it was learned today.

The plot was admitted by Alberto Cianca, former Italian deputy, who is still being held with Giuseppi Sardelli and Alfari Tarchiani for storing high explosives in their homes.

At the time of the arrest police were motivated by the theory that the trio planned to bomb either Italian delegates to the League of Nations council at Geneva or the bridal train of Princess Marie Jose of Belgium.

When Cianca was summoned before a magistrate for questioning it was revealed that his home sheltered a powerful motor boat engine as well as the explosives.

The engine puzzled the police, but Cianca boldly explained to the magistrate the use for which it was destined, confidently serving for himself and his companions any knowledge that explosives had been secreted in his home.

According to a bill found among Cianca's papers, the engine was purchased more than a year ago. Cianca said the plot had proceeded to point where the inland cities had been "ripped off" to be prepared for a wholesale delivery.

FLEECE BOSTON MEN OF $6000

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 1 (AP)—Leaving their life savings of $6000 in hands of two confidence men who worked on them an ancient race track swindle, John Mortenson, 60, and his nephew, Kati Taaske, 42, boarded a train here tonight to return to their home in Boston.

The money was to have provided for a winter of rest for Mortenson, who is in ill health.

The men told police they loaned the money to two new acquaintances who claimed they have won $20,000 on a horse race but who had to show an equal amount to "show good faith" in their wager. Mortensen and Taaske understood they were to get back $11,000.

NEGRO LYNCHED IN GEORGIA

Ocilla, Ga., Feb. 1 (AP)—Jimmy Irvine, a negro, accused of attacking and killing a 14-year-old white girl yesterday, was beaten to death and his body burned about 10 miles from here today, by a crowd of several hundred men who had taken him by force from Sheriff Tyler.

Irvine was captured at Mystic after an all-night man hunt by Sheriff Tyler and deputies. Bringing the negro to jail here, the sheriff was accosted by a crowd in the center of Ocilla. The crowd overpowered the sheriff, he said, in a struggle in which he was injured slightly.

The negro was taken to the place where the body of the girl, daughter of a prominent family, had been found. The lynching occurred there.

Sheriff Tyler said the negro confessed the crime to him upon his capture.

Acosta Must Pay His Wife or Go to Jail

Mineola, N. Y., Feb. 1 (AP)—Bert Acosta, transatlantic flyer, was taken to the Nassau County jail today when County Judge Smith deferred sentence for a week on the abandonment charge Acosta pleaded guilty to last month.

The court ruled that the $3000 bail which was posted for Acosta by Charles A. Levine had expired. Judge Smith told Acosta that he would delay passing sentence for a week, if within that time Acosta made a payment toward the support of his wife and two children he would receive a suspended jail terms. Otherwise he will be sent to prison for a definite term.

TUGBOAT SINKS, 14 DROWN

Beaumont, Tex., Feb. 1 (AP)—Fourteen members of the crew of the tugboat Edgard F. Coney today were believed to be at the bottom of the Gulf of Mexico with their boat.

A radio message from the Standard Oil Company's ship Liebre said the tug went down in a storm Tuesday night, about 70 miles northeast of Port Arthur, Tex.

The message said the crew of a barge the tug was towing had been rescued. The Liebre was expected to dock here today.

The tug and barge left Port Arthur Tuesday for Mobile. Twenty-four hours later the Liebre sighted the barge with a distress signal flying and from the rescued crew learned the fate of the tug.

It was reported there were seven officers and seven sailors aboard, but the names of only four were known. They were William Brennen, master; O. G. Pyle, chief engineer; O. R. Kenney, first mate, and R. Durin, steward. All have families at Port Arthur.

The tugboat Asher J. Hudson, with a crew of 12, left Port Arthur to search the vicinity of the tragedy.

The Edgar F. Coney was 25 years old and recently was purchased by the Sabine Towing Company for $65,000 from Phillip Shore & Co. of Miami, Fla. For many years it was used in Caribbean Sea and Atlantic Ocean coastwise trade.

Missing Girl Found; Hides Out Again

Bridgeport, Ct., Feb. 1 (INS)—Found after a state-wide search of a month, only to disappear again, Miss Dorothy Baldwin, 20, today was again the object of a wide search by the police.

Trains and bus lines were under surveillance, as she was believed to be in the city.

Thought at various times to have been murdered, forced into white slavery or to have eloped, the girl was found to have been working as a waitress in a hotel here since January 6, four days after her disappearance.

The hotel manager's suspicions were aroused when he compared the description of the missing girl with "Mary Dean," one of the waitresses.

He questioned her, but she denied she was Miss Baldwin.

After the manager communicated with police, they went to her room, only to find she had fled. A photograph that had been forgotten was identified by the parents as Miss Baldwin.

76 REDS SEIZED IN BERLIN

Berlin, Feb. 1 (AP)—Seventy-six Communists were arrested by police raiding a headquarters where plans were being made for demonstrations today.

Those arrested were stripped of their arms, mostly brass knuckles, knives and the like.

Up to noon no rioting had been reported in Berlin or elsewhere in Germany, but police were held in readiness for emergencis.

The possibility was always present that isolated unemployment demonstrations and street rows might occur.

The authorities say the time has come to urg strong action against Communist agitators.

Hamburg, Feb. 1 (AP)—Police believed today they had well in hand the situation growing out of rioting and other Communist disorders in the working class districts in the past two days.

Large groups of unemployed refused to disperse and the police had to use their weapons to break up the meetings. Many persons were injured.

TWO INJURED IN TRIPLE CRASH

Erratic driving of Lawrence McGrath of Barrett st., Lynn, was blamed for a triple automobile crash early today on the Salem Turnpike in Saugus, in which two persons were injured and a score more imperiled.

McGrath was arrested by Saugus police charged with drunkenness and driving under the influence of liquor. A companion, Joseph Duprey, of Willingsford vt., also was also charged with drunkenness.

Saugus police said that McGrath was driving in the direction of Lynn, hampering traffic on the turnpike by zigzagging from one side of the road to the other. Suddenly, police said, he jammed on his brakes so suddenly that a machine following was unable to avoid a collision.

Thus car, operated by Harold Willock of Gold st., South Boston, rammed McGrath's car. While they were still locked together, a bus coming from Boston loaded with passengers, sped along the road, and the driver was forced to swerve to avoid a crash.

As he did so, another automobile, operated by Walter Abernathy of Reston st., Lynn, following closely behind the bus, rammed Willock's car. Willock and a companion, Earle Pooler, of White st. pl., Cambridge, were hurled to the roadway, falling almost under the wheels of the bus.

Willock and Pooler were both badly cut about the head and body, but refused treatment from Saugus police.

Army to Fight 'Human Element'; Save Fliers

Washington, Feb. 1 (AP)—The necessity of looking after the physical and mental welfare of fliers to avoid airplane accidents caused by the "human element" has resulted in the establishment of a division of aviation medicine in the office of the chief of the army air corps.

Statistics, the department said, show that 59 per cent of the accidents in commercial flying, 80 per cent in the army and 75 per cent in the navy are due to faulte of the pilot and the "human element."

While there has been a steady decrease in flying casualties, it was reported there had been no decrease in the casualties due to failures of pilots.

The department prepared a table showing the percentage of airplane accidents per thousand of military personnel as compared with automobile accidents from 1922 to 1928. In the first year, air accidents were twice as numerous as automobile accidents, or 19 per cent of total casualties for aircraft and 9 per cent for automobiles. In 1928, however, the table showed that total air accidents totalled 26 per cent as compared to 20 per cent for fatal automobile accidents.

Freezes to Death at Her Husband's Side

Holland, Mich., Feb. 1 (AP)—Death came in cruel form to Mrs. Ethel Mulder, 50, wife of a farmer living near here.

The woman froze to death within 75 feet of the fire which was blazing in her home, while her husband remained by her side, unable to save her.

The husband, Nicholas Mulder, 68, had gone early in the evening to the mail box, which is 75 feet from the house, down a steep grade. He fell and called for help. Mrs. Mulder went to him and, instead of getting him up, fell by his side. Neither was able to rise.

Eventually Mulder managed to crawl to the house. There was no telephone, and he shouted again and again for help. None came and he went back to his wife with blankets, with which he covered her.

Hours later a boarder, Ray Romyn, returned to the farm. He was able to lift the woman, but she was dead. The coroner gave a verdict, of death by freezing.

Vivid Prints and Soft Pastels Are in Fashion

PRINTED in color are our new frocks and the colors are as new as the prints which wouldn't even think of copying the patterns of other seasons. Combinations of white, pink and gray appear on a black background.

A pattern of blues surprises the beholder by a shower of vivid multi-colored confetti dots overprinted on the background of blues. Navy blue is frequently a background for a small print that seem to contain all the gay colors of the rainbow. Bright red is the chiffon background for a large floral pattern in yellow, blue and white.

The two silk frocks pictured would make delightful additions to a Southern wardrobe.

THE gay print with its vivid coloring has an added appeal for immediate wearing under a winter coat as well. The background is black, the large sprays in tones of green, and the small designs tiny pink roses.

The little frock is quite complicated in cut, with double overskirt forming apron-like front; belt at high waistline; and sleeves with deep wrist puffs. The neck line is finished with scarf collar, forming pointed tops in back, and tying center front in bow and long ends.

Model by Plotkin Bros.

A CLOSE fitting hat in black linen straw is intersected by satin bands ending in cluster of satin loops across back and low on sides.

The costume is completed by plain black pumps, and three strand pearl necklace.

The second frock is of pastel pink silk, simple and youthful, with a rippling skirt flare, and softly tied belt; flared cap sleeves, and deep bertha collar of white organdie, lightly embroidered in beige silk.

The hat is of pastel toned felt, the brim finished with flange of brown horsehair braid.

WHETHER Monsieur Patou, the Parisian couturier, is fond of his flower garden or derives his inspiration from the flower stalls along the banks of the Seine—he assuredly uses floral motifs and colors in his dresses.

The lily of the valley is his latest choice, following upon the appearance of dahlia and capucine or nasturtium shades. The custom of wearing flowers on the frock and the coat is being revived with this fragile blossom that appears in little clusters. It also appears in a clever print on a background of black, the bells white and the leaves in green.

WHETHER for day or evening, we may expect some of our new prints to be starred. A unique pattern of stars dots a silk fabric that has just been designed for resort wear. The star appears in small, medium, and large patterns and is shown in white on a blue background, in eggshell on brown or green, and in white on black. This pattern has also been seen in chiffon for evening wear.

You must have style information at your fingertips this season in a very realistic sense, for there are any number of new polishes for the nails that may give your hands individuality. Polishes in green, red, blue and black are a decidedly novel note in the matter of manicures. Another polish is perfumed. This appears in three shades, clear, medium and dark.

JUNIOR WEEK BILL IS BIG AT B. C.

Junior Week, smartest of the yearly social functions at Boston College, will start Monday afternoon with a tea dance and concludes Friday night with the Junior Prom.

Mid-year examinations, with the accompanying worry and strain, have just been completed at Chestnut Hill and the students are anticipating a week of gayety and relaxation.

Richard Gorman, football star from Charlestown, is president of the junior class and has had a hand making plans for the past two months and feels that one of the most enjoyable Junior Weeks in the tradition of this event has been arranged.

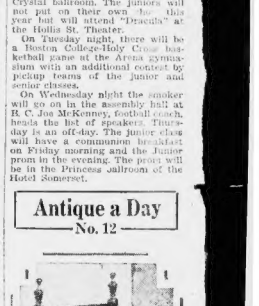
Kevin Paul Hern of Dorchester has been Gorman's first lieutenant. Alfred Fitzgerald, prom chairman; Arthur Reardon, tea dance; Tom Donahue, patrons; Tom Meagher, smoker; George Colbert, basketball night; George Mason, communion breakfast; Arthur King, show, and John Mullaney, favors and printing.

The tea dance Monday afternoon will be from four until seven, and will be held at the Hotel Kenmore's Crystal ballroom. The juniors will not put on their own show this year but will attend "Dracula" at the Hollis St. Theater.

On Tuesday night, there will be a Boston College-Holy Cross basketball game at the Arena gymnasium with an additional contest by pickup teams of the junior and senior classes.

On Wednesday night the smoker will go on in the assembly hall at B. C. Joe McKenney, football coach, heads the list of speakers. Thursday is an off-day. The junior class will have a communion breakfast on Friday morning and the Junior prom in the evening. The prom will be in the Princess ballroom of the Hotel Somerset.

Antique a Day No. 12



Two centuries and a half ago some proud young apprentice put the finishing touches to this little Carver chair and presented it for his master's approval before taking his place in the world as a journeyman. It is a miniature reproduction of chairs in regular use in early Colonial days, and is owned by eight-year-old Diana Fraser of 61 Boylston st., Cambridge. This chair will be further discussed tomorrow.

The money-scales shown in yesterday's American apparently had important uses in the days following the Revolution. In the box containing the scales is a table of money values, entitled, "A table of the weight and value of coins as they pass in the respective states of the Union (1), with their Sterling and Federal value." It lists the 13 original states, and the typographic errors in the old style, with the letter "s" in the old-fashioned form, have been added to the table of values, the box contains weights and coins.

In connection with the Massachusetts Tercentenary Year, the Boston Evening American will publish from day to day interesting specimens of authentic antiques. Readers possessing genuine antiques, particularly articles of Colonial or early American origin or of historic association, are invited to forward photographs and records for publication. In case no photograph is available, the American will send a corps of its staff cameramen to photograph your antique if you live in Greater Boston. Material should be addressed to "Antique Editor, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston."

Women to Hear Allen on Welfare

CONFERENCES of one kind or another are on the State Federation program for the next two weeks and chief among them are the luncheon-meetings of the social welfare and community service departments.

That the clubwomen of the State may fully comprehend the 1930 welfare program of Governor Allen, some of those who are responsible for the welfare of the State's dependents will be speakers at the Social Welfare Department conference, Thursday, February 13, in the Colonial, at the Henry E. Burroughs Newsboys' Foundation, 10 Somerset st.

Governor Allen will be present and outline his program. Members of the Children's Commission and the commissioners of correction and charities will explain the chief executive's suggestions, with special emphasis upon the report of the Children's Commission and raising the school standards.

Mrs. Albert E. Pierce, State chairman of the department, has arranged the program and is to preside over the meeting.

"The end of government is the achievement of satisfaction and happiness of its citizens. Society can be happy in the presence of poverty or suffering, or poverty," said Governor Allen in his inaugural address of 1929. In 1930 he made vision the keynote of the welfare program.

To this end an invitation has gone out to the president and three members of each federated club to attend the conference and take back details of the program. The members of the clubs of the State Federation are keenly alive to each local problem. Many are serving on boards of both public and private agencies and are thus making possible opportunity for others less fortunately circumstanced.

The majority of the members of Mrs. Carter's department are actually engaged in welfare work as experts in their particular field. Others are serving as board members, while all are closely in touch with community affairs.

Mrs. Carter is extension secretary of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children along with her club chairmanship of social welfare.

CLUB INSTITUTE

Next Thursday at the Hotel Vendome, from 10 a. m. until noon, club women will hear brief discussions on club finance. This topic always of vital interest to club workers, is most timely when so many clubs are considering ways and means and taxing their ingenuity to the utmost on behalf of the foundation fund. Mrs. Arthur Devens Potter, Massachusetts director in the General Federation, will be present to speak on the present status of the fund in the Bay State and to answer all questions concerning it.

Among the women who are to talk on ways and means, not only of making money, but also of spending it, are Mrs. Joseph A. McDonald, West Newton; Mrs. Alden Litchfield, Scituate; Mrs. Albert E. Crocker, Ashland; Mrs. Mina del Castillo, Cambridge; Mrs. J. O. Cook, Amherst; Mrs. Edward M. Parker, Belmont; Mrs. A. Augustus Whipple, Wakefield; Mrs. Stewart A. Colpitts, Allston; Mrs. Charles P. Wright, Marblehead; Mrs. Charlotte A. Tower, Dorchester; Mrs. Stephen Bradford, Dorchester, and Mrs. Charles S. Marshall, Braintree.

COMMUNITY SERVICE CONFERENCE

Speakers at the luncheon conference of the Community Service Department of the State Federation, to be held in Parlor A of the Hotel Statler next Friday at 10 a. m., will cover many topics of community interest. The work of the picture advisers and the field of service in the motion picture industry will be discussed by various speakers.

Omar A. Blaisdell of Wollaston, motion picture chairman of the Community Service Department, will present the year's program and briefly touch upon plans for next season.

Mrs. F. J. Flagg of Newtonville, national membership chairman of the American Society for University Women, Mrs. Walter M. Hunt of Athol and Mrs. William F. Hosmer of Middleboro will consider different aspects of the work and problems of motion picture advisers.

Among those reporting club accomplishments in community service will be Miss Ida Pierce of Springfield, on the work for the blind carried on by the City Federation of Springfield; Mrs. Wm. G. Potter of New Bedford, on the work for the blind in her city; Mrs. A. Dwight Prescott of Wollaston on the work of her club for the crippled children at Canton; Mrs. Marcus Wright of Quincy on club co-operation with the Family Welfare and S. P. C. C. organization; Mrs. Ernest F. Drew of Auburndale on the Hospital Benefit Shop, and Mrs. Leon D. Ferry of Agawam on the work for civic betterment among western Massachusetts clubs.

Other speakers will be Mrs. Eva Whiting White of Peabody House, Boston, and director of the School of Social Work at Simmons College on constructive work for clubwomen; Miss Alice M. Bartlett of the Massachusetts Welfare Department, on suggestions for club service; Rev. Victor W. Searle of Wollaston on volunteer service in communities; Mrs. Milton F. Beebee of Malden on community planning; Mrs. Edwin L. Pride of Somerville, girl scout commissioner for the Metropolitan District, on how clubs can promote girl scout work in their communities; and Miss Ruth Hilasdeli of Wollaston, chemist at the State House, Boston, on chemistry as an aid to the business of the state.

An additional feature will be the showing of an instructive and interesting film, possibly, "How the Picture Got Its Voice."

Miss Dorothy Richardson of Allerton will sing negro spirituals, accompanied by Miss Dorothy Wood. Special guests of honor will be Mrs. Axel A. Rickard, state president; Mrs. Carl L. Schrader, and Mrs. William J. McDonald.

FRAMINGHAM WOMAN'S CLUB

The collection of dolls in Old World costumes representing the racial background of present day Massachusetts, is being exhibited in the public libraries of Framingham and Framingham Center, where it is attracting much attention and interest.

It will be shown at the Boston Public Library during the winter meeting of the Massachusetts Library Club and then will go to Natick, South Boston, Arlington, Watertown and other points, before returning to Boston for the Tercentenary Celebration during the summer. Favors Night Work and Day Spending

Editor Boston American:

I am writing to you in regards to night work. In New York about 100,000 men and women work nights. Several Boston men of my acquaintance after finishing work between the horus, 12 to 5 a. m., would like some entertainment, educational, recreational, sports and so forth.

But Boston is a closed house after midnight. It is unnatural for a human being to go to bed after work. Why not confine most of the manufacturing jobs to night work so as to give the people who have plenty of money a chance to shop in the day time, attend theaters and socially mix all around.

The reason for so much unemployment is because a certain percentage of the population is too busy making money to not buying clothes, cars and mixing in socially. It is hurting everybody. To make money people must spend money. Money is only a means for obtaining food, clothes, health, pleasure and the raising of families.

A person to be happy must have friendship with everybody. I have a bit of money, but no time to spend it. I tried to get a day job at some interesting work, but there are no such jobs.

Correct Address of Samuel Garabedian

Editor Boston American:

In the Boston Evening American of Jan. 21 you gave my address as Chelsea. I have never in my life lived or worked in Chelsea. I have given the correct my address as Broadway, South Boston. I would like you to correct this.

SAMUEL GARABEDIAN.

Prohibition and the Old Saloon

Editor Boston American:

The Boston American stands for many reforms for the common people, but one thing I sincerely regret is that it is against the law that has taken away the saloon. For liquor to many workingmen was far more productive in the old days than today with the law as it is. In the United States as a whole, Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale University, a well known economic authority, declares that not over 16 per cent of liquor is now consumed as compared with the days of the saloon. Prohibition at its worst beats the former saloon.

Nagging Male More Cruel Than His Mate

Editor Boston American:

This story of the World War was told by the Rev. Dr. Ralph W. Stockman, pastor of the Mission Ave. M. E. Church, New York city, in his noon address at King's Chapel during the week. It is the story of a man charging up that followed a husband into battle.

This officer wrote back to his wife: "Please don't send me any more nagging letters. Let me enjoy this war in peace." As the preacher talked some woman snickered in the church. It was very perceptible.

Now let me as a woman handle this nagging business. It is supposed to be a feminine weakness, but woman's nagging is usually pointing towards some end or deed which women want done or omitted. This type of nagging is harmless. Masculine nagging is too direct. It is like a knife piercing the very soul of the victim and makes a cruel wound. Note the distinction.

End of Kitchens Forecast for Homes

Editor Boston American:

Must the kitchen go? Modern life is undergoing so many changes and the demands of Women's clubs are so exacting that the food of the future in New York City and probably in Boston, will be sent into homes, piping hot with a great variety, at rates that will well compete with old fashioned ways of cooking.

The modern woman is apparently getting tired of kitchen work, even with a maid. She wants to get rid of the responsibility of making up the daily budget of food and expense.

Women's work is getting to be away from the home life in all sorts of ventures and nothing is going to check the growing generation of young women in this respect.

Machine cooked food will be served in homes by carriers. Orders will be given daily. Cooked food repositories will be in evidence in large cities. Kitchen work will be abandoned in many homes.

Bootleggers Active In Time of Noah

Editor Boston American:

May I put this flea in your ear about drunkenness, which was regarded as an evil away back in the days of Noah. It was then considered a matter of family control. Generally, the wife took the husband under her wing and made him walk Spanish for a while.

May I also say to your recent correspondent that he is wrong about drunkenness in early times. It induced me to write this.

Everyone knows that the principal intoxicating drinks in Europe were wine or beer, and wine often was diluted with water Science came into action then and concocted distilled intoxicants of high power, but cheap in price. Then London gin shops came into prominence in the 18th century and advertised that people could get drunk for a penny. England passed the gin law of 1764. This gave rise to riots and bootleggers.

Don't imagine bootleggers are a 20th century combine. They came into vogue on a small scale in the days of Noah and Lot. There is nothing new about them. They are the Rip Van Winkles of the liquor squad that never died.

Unemployment and Future U. S. Soldiers

Editor Boston American:

The United States government, in time of war, depends upon the army and navy, also volunteers and men conscripted.

The men chosen must pass a medical examination. I understand, during the World War, thousands were rejected on account of physical defects, mainly on account of malnutrition, and that the woman must have proper care, food, etc., in order that the offspring, future soldiers, may be physically strong.

As I see it, the United States government depends on the strong physical makeup of these soldiers for our very safety. Unemployment means to thousands of people in these United States practical starvation. Half-starved soldiers make poor defenders of the country.

Is it not the duty, nay the law, for this United States government to find work for all unemployed, to the extent that when needed they may be found physically fit to defend the country?

There will be an Italian evening at the Temple Street Church tomorrow evening with the Rev. Henry Vincent Hill preaching on "Mussolini and the New Italy." Italian music of high order will be rendered by Signora Renato Pacini, who will be the soloist in "The Italian Night." In the morning the Rev. Mr. Hill will preach on "Forveness."

WINTHROP

In the Junior High School Hall Monday, 11 a. m. the editor of the church page of the Boston Evening American will give a talk on "The Making of a Newspaper." He will have for his audience two newspaper clubs of high school students and others from who are interested in knowing more of a great metropolitan press.

RABBI ABRAMS

At the annual meeting of the congregation of Beacon St. Temple the rabbi who has been leader for ten years was reappointed with a substantial increase in salary. Membership has grown from 266 to 600 members. Growth is shown all along the line, and from the old Union Park synagogue, the congregation now occupies one of the most beautiful buildings in Greater Boston.

FIRST 1930 PAGEANT

A dozen or more of the Somerville churches have combined to produce a tercentenary pageant. The title "Toward Freedom of Soul" is in twelve episodes and each church will be responsible for an episode. Several of the pastors will take part, and a perform ance will be given in the Universalist hall near the high school. The date is February 11.

BOY SOLOIST

Master Thomas Howell, the boy soloist at Trinity Church, will go to the city of Lowell tomorrow as special singer at St. Paul's Church in that city. The young singer, who is usually found in the Trinity choir, is frequently called to fill engagements in other churches and cities.

TREMONT METHODIST.

Much anxiety is felt by members and friends of the Tremont Methodist Church as to the future of the work now carried on there. A membership of something like 500 appears already in favor of continuing the efforts in preference to affiliation and merger with the Grace Church of Copley Square, so it is hoped will soon give in decision as to the future disposition of what appears to be a knotty problem.

PAYSON PARK

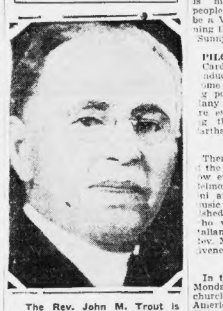
Dedication services will be held tomorrow forenoon at the Payson Park Congregational Church, Belmont. The new parish house which has been erected gives to the church an equipment which the minister, the Rev. David N. Beach says is equal to any suburban church of Greater Boston. At a little before twelve tomorrow the consecration sermon by the minister will march from the church to the parish house. Rejoice in the consecration sermon by the minister's morning message.

Religious Friendships Grow

Rev. A. B. Chalmers — Rabbi L. Schwartz — Miss T. A. Dinsdaly — Dr. W. E. Gardner

The first union service of its kind will be held one week from tomorrow when Christian and Jewish students of the colleges and schools in and about Greater Boston assemble in the evening at Temple Israel. Rabbi Harry Levi will deliver the address. This movement by the Christian and Jewish students is announced as of "the utmost significance in the waning of religious prejudices and the strengthening of unity among churches of all loyalties." The Student Work Council of Boston headed by Dr. William E. Gardner of Trinity Church, is co-operating in making this unique gathering a success. The picture shows Dr. Gardner and three others of the committee preparing the program in which not only Rabbi Levi, but many Christian clergymen will take part. Rabbi Schwartz is an associate at Temple Israel. Miss Dinsdaly is a secretary at the Y. W. C. A., and the Rev. Mr. Chalmers a leader in the student committee.

John M. Trout



The Rev. John M. Trout is known as one of the progressive ministers of the State, and his employment by the Massachusetts Federation of Churches is welcomed by most of the churches with enthusiasm. He will begin his labors with the Federation today.

Fr. Ross and Bootlegger

FATHER J. ELLIOTT ROSS, the Paulist Father, who has visited Boston for the past week, gave the following interview to the church page editor:

Q—Will you give your views on prohibition?

A.—No, for among other reasons, it would be impertinent for an entire stranger to express an opinion on a question that just now has a special local application.

"But let me reply with a question for my own information—is that famous New England conscience of yours producing complete sincerity on this very provocative matter? That is, do those who vote dry live dry?

"And do those who bewail the graft and corruption and crime coming out of bootlegging, refrain from drinking bootleg stuff?

"However, even though I won't express an opinion on prohibition, I shall answer the question your Bostonian politeness keeps you from asking. I do—in this regard at least—practice what I preach. I am a total abstainer, although I have not always been so.

"I grew up in a home where we always had liquor and nobody went to excess. I like nearly all kinds of intoxicating beverages.

"But I became a total abstainer back before the war—and before Volstead—when I was stationed in the old first ward of Chicago, represented by Hinky Dink and Bathhouse John.

"Out of all, that experience drove home to me the terrible social evils coming out of the abuse of liquor.

"Second, I did not want to co-operate in any way with the downfall of other men by giving, through my example, a sanction to drinking.

"Third, every drunkard I dealt with had once been a moderate drinker. Many of them had been strong as I was, and how could I tell I would never go into drunkenness?

"Prohibition—whether advisable or inadvisable—has given me additional reasons for being a total abstainer. I do not wish to run the risk of poison liquor. And I do not see how I could buy from a bootlegger without co-operating in the graft and corruption coming out of the system."

STAGE AND SCREEN

WITH UNION THERE IS STRENGTH

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

IN another column will be found a letter addressed to this department by Mr. Thomas H. Finigan, President of Local No. 9, American Federation of Musicians. Upon what seemed to be a casual observation made to this writer by Mr. Florenz Ziegfeld some time ago, while explaining the perils of producing musical plays in Boston, Mr. Finigan lifts a voice in deep protest. Very properly he asks the privilege of rebuttal.

* * *

WHAT we may fairly regard as honest differences of opinion between the organized musicians and theater owners, was responsible for the complete break up of all legitimate attractions in Philadelphia and Cincinnati during the early weeks of the season and Boston escaped similar fate only by the proverbial eyelash. The points of difference are of no particular public interest beyond a natural purpose desire to have open and prosperous theaters. It must be said for the musicians that there is no trade to be picked up over night or snatched from a mail order catalogue. Long years of study and painstaking work is the price any musician must pay before he becomes an acceptable journeyman.

Nicholas Young

BUT curious complications arise whenever a producer moves a musical play into Boston for its first engagement. The musicians' contractual arrangement with the Boston theaters assumes from it what is called the "road" basis. That is to say, that 60 per cent. of musicians must be composed of members of the local union; that a producer may not carry on his own staff more than 40 per cent. of the musicians employed for an engagement.

* * *

NOW, over at the Wilbur, Ray Bolger, taking her first fling at producing, employs Don Cochran and his band of 11 members as a playing unit. Therefore, in order to carry the augmented eight balance, Mr. Bolger is required to engage 12 local musicians who can be only seven of those the kinds herself in the unhappy predicament of paying salaries to 14 people who neither draw a bow nor blow a horn. At the local scale of $75 a week, Mr. Bolger is paying the musicians $1005 a week for which she receives no service that she requires.

* * *

MR. ZIEGFELD, who never is squeamish about making lavish outlay upon his productions, explained yesterday that the Eddie Cantor show, Whoopee, was not a success anywhere in London because it contained George Olsen's jazz band. To match Olsen's musical setting local managers on the established 60-40 basis would have cost him more, he said, than he could afford to pay.

Drama's Appeal at Its Midseason Zenith Has Quality to Draw Playgoing Throngs

BOBBE ARNST

PERFECT NORDIC type is what the experts say of Miss Arnst who is one of the reasons why Mr. Ziegfeld's "Simple Simon" at the Colonial is a wow of a triumph. Ed Wynn's the big star.

KATHERINE HASTINGS AND THOMAS MITCHELL

PAPA IS PROUD, as can be seen from Mr. Mitchell's happy look at Miss Hastings. Baby is doing nicely, thank you. It's all a part of the hilarity of life in "Little Accident" at Plymouth.

GRACE BRINKLEY

MISS BRINKLEY must be posing for a Venus in her most alluring mood. Cupid modeled his bow from her lips. She is in George White's "Flying High" coming to the Shubert Monday.

Toyland Beauty

ETHEL LYNNE

MISS LYNNE is one of the Babes in Toyland," Herbert operetta coming to the Majestic.

TOYLAND WILL SEND BABES TO BOSTON

THE success achieved by the Victor Herbert Festival at the Majestic Theater has prompted a sponsoring committee and the management of Shubert to extend the arrangement and expand its scope, making the Boston a continuous supply of musical entertainment of a high order until spring.

The Boston committee will continue to draw for its supply upon the parent house of the present season in musical revivals, the Park Theater in Gotham, but likewise will be independent in its operations, the co-operative arrangement with a similar committee in Philadelphia having come to an end.

With this development the subscription books for the Boston enterprise have been re-opened for a series of operettas embracing next week's offering, Victor Herbert's "Babes in Toyland," and others to be selected from "The Serenade," "Robin Hood," "The Merry Widow," "The Chocolate Soldier," "The Firefly" and "The Count of Luxemburg." Through the remainder of the season, the repertoire will not be confined exclusively to Herbert works, as has hitherto been the case.

As in the past, each offering will be presented for a fortnight. Those which come direct from New York will go from Boston to Philadelphia for a similar period, while the attractions that already have appeared in the Quaker City will swing off on a circle that embraces Chicago as its furthest west.

Chicago is operating on a subscription basis and reports the largest subscriptions of any city in the country. Philadelphia's failure to mesh into the scheme of things with Boston is due to the fact that the cycle was initiated there without subscriptions and is operated on the traditional lines of the commercial theater, under the auspices of a local committee.

"FIRST NIGHT SHOCK TROOPS" GET THE "GOAT" OF ACTORS

ASK any star of musical comedy, revue, drama or comedy what he fears most on the Broadway stage and he will, without a moment's hesitation, say: "A first night." A first night is a terrible strain. One feels as if he is about to fall into space. Even the established stars, blase in every respect, feel the first night.

TO the mere theatergoer it is a difficult thing to understand. Why should an actor, who has had four weeks of rehearsal in the very play that is now having its first night, dread the occasion? Why should an actor who probably has had years of experience and many other first nights dread the new one? These questions are also asked by the actor in a psychological attempt to conquer his feelings. Yet, all things considered, the actor answers the 7:30 call of an opening night, a nervous man. He goes to his dressing room and mechanically makes ready. Ask Bert Lahr, the featured comedian in "Flying High," the new George White musical comedy, coming to the Shubert Monday.

Bert Lahr

"First night audiences on Broadway," says Lahr, "are the most bizarre to be found anywhere on earth. They vary only to the extent of the producer's and actors' friends and relatives who trot along bedecked, maybap, in hired dress suits to shout three cheers and wave the partisan flag of stimulated enthusiasm. The major portion of the audience is composed of hard eyed, dyed-in-the-wool first night shock troops. A knowing wag has aptly termed them 'first night flop troops,' for, in reality, practically all of them are routes for a flop show.

"Broadway thrives on jealousy. Even the critics are not immune to this obnoxious virus. An example is found in the remark of one critic to another on the opening night of a new play. He is widely quoted as having said, 'I'm afraid it's a hit.' Not only do the reviewers sit in their seats with a 'You've got to show me' expression, but competing producers, ticket brokers, booking agents, and other so-called of the wise guy gentry assume similar attitudes.

OPERA OPENS SEASON ON MONDAY

BOSTON'S opera season opens at the Boston Opera House Monday night, when the Chicago Civic Opera Company will begin its annual two weeks of grand opera. This is the company's eighth season. According to present indications, it will surpass all other years. Sixteen different operas will be given, and among these, French, Italian and German are evenly divided.

"Fidelio," Beethoven's only opera, which was offered in Chicago by the company this year for the first time, will be sung on Friday evening of the second week. Mme. Leider will appear in this.

"La Traviata," Chicago's favorite opera, will be given on Wednesday evening of the second week, Mme. Muzio will sing "Violetta." Theodore Strack, a German tenor, will be heard here for the first time, and likewise Kathleen Kersting, who made her debut in Chicago last week.

The repertoire for next week follows:

Ever So Songful

MARIA OLSZEWSKA

MME. OLSZEWSKA arrives with the Chicago Opera Company for its two weeks in Boston.

SINGING GOES LONG WAY

THE story of a popular song can be told in the chronicles of the songs in "The Little Show," which com- Feb. 10 to the Wilbur for a limited engagement with the Broadway company headed by Clifton Webb, Fred Allen and Libby Holman. When the show opened a year ago, in Gotham, the first song to claim attention from dance orchestras, the broadcasters and the song-pluggers was "Moanin' Low." The famous ending, as sung by Libby Holman, "He's the kind of a man needs the kind of woman like me," swept the country and helped make the show a hit. For, although the critics rated this revue highly as one having both charm and youth and humor, more is needed to draw than a million dollar for a musical show than that. Songs are essential that are hits, and these "The Little Show" had.

On top of "Moanin' Low," which is the crooning ballad type almost came "Since I Made a Habit of You," with its "I've given up smoking, I've given up drinking, since I made a habit of you." Yet the song that now is the biggest seller, according to the latest reports from the music publishers, is "Can't We Be Friends?", which Miss Holman also sings in her exciting fashion.

Homers and Melius

Katherine Homer, the pianist and daughter of Louis Homer, will accompany her mother for the first time in Boston when the famous contralto gives a recital in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, February 23. The Homers will then appear with Luella Melius, noted soprano.

'SALLY'SURE IS EYEFUL, EARFUL

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

OUT of brilliant-hued Technicolor, "Sally" cuts a costume for herself all wool and a yard wide. Since there is no other "Sally" but Marilyn Miller, that bewitching blonde trips it lightly, and ably, through this picture, which is now the feature at the Washington Street Gympia, and the Uptown. After seeing her we wonder how it happened that this dancing damsel kept out of the studios for so long.

* * *

NATURALLY, since this was originally a stage offering by the Great Glorifier himself, with Miss Miller as the glorified, changing it over into a movie merited the best that color could give. The result is a film of generous length, and of lavish variety. It is a good photographic reproduction of the footlight spectacle, and the best thing about it is the liveliness of its star. The remembered songs are there; the incidental music, the ensembles, the specialties. The camera sweeps a little further afield, which is one advantage Hollywood has over the stage. The story was never the vital thing in "Sally"; the plot is another version of the poor girl finding her heart's desire in a gilded youth.

Alexander Gray

MISS MILLER is both an eyeful and an earful in her captivating self. She fairly takes the picture by the forelock and makes it a personal triumph. She out-distances all her fellow performers. Again and again she dances superbly. And her acting is well up to par. As for looks, she has them out at times she seems too greatly affected with stagey traits, one must remember that this is her initial film venture, and that experience will teach her the tricks of this art. That she sings well is a big point in her favor. Her combination of good points far overweighs her lesser failings, and it's pleasant both to see and hear.

BEHIND her trails Joe E. Brown, excellent comedian, and very funny in "Sally." He has charge of the humor, and a big number of laughs can be accredited to him. He is easy in his labor, sure-footed as he becomes such an old trouper as he is, and never misses a chance to score.

* * *

OF the rest Maude Turner Gordon and Ford Sterling are the best characterizations. Alexander Gray as the hero is a distinct disappointment; he never registers. We miss our guess if it develops that he has what the flappers call sex appeal. But you never can tell; the women fans do have queer tastes, and matinee idols never have to be capable. Nora Lane is quite personable as the girl who failed to win the hero's love. Peri Kelton lacks about everything.

Sunkissed Smile

BARBARA KENT

MISS KENT is a reporter's sweetheart in "The Night Ride" showing at the Park.

DIDN'T WISH TO MEET 'T. R.'

ONE of the most thrilling things about a stage career, according to Agnes Elliot Scott, now appearing with the Copley players in "The Middle Watch," is the unexpected encounters in life. Because it contained George Olsen's jazz band, to match Olsen's musical setting local managers on the established 60-40 basis would have cost him more, he said, than he could afford to pay.

Agnes Elliot Scott

"One of my meeting with the late Theodore Roosevelt. It was during a benefit performance at the White House grounds. If you can imagine it, I very nearly refused to meet President Roosevelt. My part called for a raggedy sort of costume, and of course theatrical makeup at that range is apt to be a bit grotesque.

"I heard what I thought was the cue for the second scene, went dashly madly toward the out-door stage with my rags clutched about me and found I was too early. Then when someone approached me with the invitation to meet Mr. Roosevelt, I refused. But no sooner had I spoken than the President himself came up smiled delightfully, shook my hand and said, 'Miss Scott, I feel like a personal friend of yours after seeing you act.'"

Boy Talks Right Out Among Screen Stars

Philippe De Lacy, child actor, appears as Prince Christian in the prologue to "General Crack," now playing at the Fenway. He has been cast in almost a hundred silent and talking pictures. Born in Nancy, France, on July 25, 1917, Philippe was educated in the United States and started in motion pictures less than nine years ago. His first role was with Geraldine Farrar.

MISS WHITE has a barrelful of pep and personality. She is the stellar light in "The Girl From Woolworth's" at the Keith-Albee.

JEANETTE LOFF is ever so deeply in love with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in "Party Girl" at the Modern and Beacon. She shows it, too.

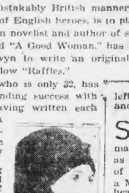
RONALD COLMAN TO DIVORCE ENGLISH FOR YANK ROLE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service, Inc.)

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 1—Ronald Colman, whose English accent and unmistakably British mannerisms has kept him in the restricted class of English heroes, is to play an American. Louis Bromfield, American novelist and author of such best sellers as "The Green Bay Tree" and "A Good Woman," has been brought to Hollywood by Samuel Goldwyn to write an original modern American story for Colman to follow "Raffles."

Bromfield, who is only 32, has had an astounding success with his fiction having written each year a book that has attracted more than ordinary notice.



Louella O. Parsons

The signing of Bromfield is only one of the important events in the life of Samuel Goldwyn. Evelyn Laye, English actress who has made such a sensation in "Bitter Sweet," is due out here July 1. Her introduction to American talkies will be in a musical comedy written for her by Rudolph Friml. Then, of course, there is the arrival of Eddie Cantor and Florenz Ziegfeld next month to produce "Whoopee." Looks very much as if 1930 is going to be a year worth remembering by the indefatigable Mr. Goldwyn.

SINCE Lawrence Tibbett sang his way into the hearts of the motion picture theater-goers, the leading men of Hollywood have yearned to do something on the order of "The Rogue Song." Of course they are not fortunate enough to have the Tibbett voice but many of them can carry a tune and since it is now the fashion for the public to want its favorites to warble you may be reasonably sure we will have plenty of musical comedies. Paramount, realizing that in Buddy Rogers they have a valuable property, have given him the lead in "Follow Through."

Perhaps their decision was hastened by the fact that Schwab of Schwab and Mandel, producers of this comedy, put in a bid for Buddy whose amazing popularity continues to grow. I have an idea if they were to take a poll of votes in the theaters throughout the country Buddy would come pretty near topping the list. He is the type every young flapper yearns to have for her own best beau and flappers are the most enthusiastic audience in the world.

HAL WALLIS is a busy young man. It is no child's job to run a studio the size of First National and it is delighting all of the gang who knew Hal before he became First National's boss. The other day he took time off to sign Lila Lee to make four pictures. That means five, actually, for Lila will do the four after she finishes "Under Western Skies" soon to go into production at First National. "I signed her," said Wallis, "because we are going to make a series of pictures that are suited to her." Lila had no more than left Mr. Wallis' office than Dorothy MacKaill called in to talk about her next picture. I didn't hear what it was all about but it must have satisfied Dot because she left the studio looking pleased and happy.

SOL LESSER, once more actively engaged in picture making, said the other night that as soon as he finishes "The Eyes of the World," "When a Man's a Man" will be produced. I also heard at the same time that Joseph Schenck is due home. He will probably confirm the selection of Jeanette MacDonald for "Bride 66." That reminds me that Lois Moran, who was to have had the role, has played in bad luck for she has a bad throat which prevented her playing the part. Another little item of interest is that John Stahl leaves New York Monday en route to Hollywood with a number of new plays he purchased in New York.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Leo Diegel, Mack Sennett and Walter Hagen talking over golf scores at the Embassy Club. Colleen Moore and Julanne Johnstone lunching together and stopping to talk with John McCormick and Martin Quigley, good looking publisher of the Exhibitors' Herald at another table at the Embassy. Lawrence Tibbett getting an overwhelming reception at the opening of "Devil May Care." Dorothy Jordan, orchids on the shoulder and a new dress for the occasion, tremendously excited at her first premiere. Pretty Mrs. Jack Conway, formerly Virginia Bushman, a daughter of Frances X., and her director husband having a hot chocolate with Sid Grauman during the intermission. Sol Wurtzel and a party of guests at the Roosevelt following the premiere. Clarence Brown dancing with a pretty girl. That's all today.

Among the stars are Scotty Fridell, comic extraordinary, and Jessie MacDonald, a prime favorite. They are aided by Ralph Smith, Walter Wayne, Fred Walker, Ray Allen, Jule Paulson, Lillian Fernald, Ed Ryan, the juvenile dancing marvel, and many others.

STAGE AND SCREEN

MIND'S EYE IS BEST AID FOR PLAY BUYER

By CROSBY GAIGE

Producer of "Little Accident," at the Plymouth

A SPRING playwright who instantly besieges producers with their cherished wares in the hope of getting one of the coveted first billings. And when they fail, as most of them do, they sit back and wonder what there can be in the manuscripts of others that producers buy. The answer is obvious. Producers buy only the kind of plays they think will succeed often their judgment is wrong; sometimes sadly so but no producer invests in a play unless he is enthusiastic about it. Failures come from the fact that what looks bright and smart and convincing on paper becomes trite and unconvincing when acted.

Crosby Gaige

The man who can look several steps beyond the manuscript page and visualize the drama on the stage is the one who succeeds more often than not, the successful producer. That this is no easy task is evidenced every theatrical season, when perhaps 80 per cent. of the plays produced turn into flops.

Farce is the most difficult type of play to judge. So much depends on the acting that it is almost impossible to tell in manuscript form what will or will not be hilariously and continuously funny.

TIGER PICTURE DUE SOON

AN announcement of interest is the coming to The Repertory of an exceptional exploitation picture. Commencing Sunday evening, February 9, Commander George M. Dyott's picture, "Hunting Tigers in India," will be shown for two weeks.

The film is the result of the Vernay-Hauntheope expedition into India under the auspices of the American Museum of Natural History. It is the second of the famous travel film, "Simba," by Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, which was shown at Keith's two seasons ago.

Commander Dyott's description of the expedition, as it goes through the picture, lends a personal touch and adds to the excitement of the adventure.

Shadows That Speak Hold Fast in Public Favor

"UNHAND ME, VAMP!"
LUCIEN LITTLEFIELD evidently is worried. Jed Prouty doesn't mind. "No, No, Nanette" at the Scollay.

NORMA SHEARER
•MISS SHEARER looks just too sad. She stars in "Their Own Desire" at Loew's Orpheum during next week.

DADDY'S DARLING
LEILA HYAMS and Alec B. Francis are in "The Bishop Murder Case" at Loew's State. It's a mystery play.

STAGE ART HAS 'BIG KICK'

MISS JOAN COLEBURN, leading woman in Horace Liveright's coming play, "Dracula," at the Hollis St. through next week, was a famous actress in England before coming to America. Of her act, she says:

"As I see drama, it is divided into two classes, life as it is and life as we wish it was.

"The women I have impersonated in the theater have been, in the main, in the class of life as it is.

"In some instances, they have been very foolish, but invariably they have been intensely human and the name of their prototype is legion."

Pictures---Variety

BOWDOIN—"It's a Great Life" with the Duncan Sisters, "Twin Beds" and R. K. O. vaudeville. Cabaret night on Wednesday, special vaudeville on Friday.

WALDORF—"Take a Chance," a Mutual burlesque show featuring Tim Thomas and Max Coleman. On the screen, Saturday Night Eats" and "Mississippi Gambler."

GLOBE—Welcome Danger," and "The Awful Truth." Ted Lewis and his entertaining band will stay on Heaven" with Charles "Buddy" Rogers and Nancy Carroll.

Eddie Borden Gets Role

In addition to Gertrude Lawrence, Glenn Anders and Charlotte Granville, Eddie Borden has been added to the cast of "The Girl Who Wasn't Wise," a farce by Frederick Jackson and Louise Carson, by Fox.

Royal Sweetie

MARION NIXON
MISS NIXON is aristocracy personified in "General Crack," now at the Fenway.

Zimbalist Concert

Efrem Zimbalist will visit Boston to appear as soloist in Symphony Hall, on Sunday afternoon, February 16.

NEGROES SING IN PICTURE

A SONG on the stage which proved the hit of a theatrical season, has been built by Radio Pictures in a spectacular musical presentation. One hundred negro singers, chosen after weeks of laborious voice testing, support Marguerita Padula as she sings the inspiring Vincent Youmans's spiritual, "Hallelujah," in "Hit the Deck," now at the new B. F. Keith's.

A massive set, carefully authenticated, was built in the Radio studios to provide a setting for the number. To catch the negro mood or religious exaltation was the purpose.

PROKOFIEFF PLAYS NEW CONCERTO

By MOSES SMITH

SERGE PROKOFIEFF, brilliant Russian composer and pianist, makes his second appearance at this week's Symphony Concerts, almost four years to a day after his first appearance. He is present as guest-composer as well as soloist, for the program includes the "Scythian Suite" as well as the Second Piano Concerto. To begin and end the program, Mr. Koussevitsky, returning after a fortnight's vacation, has Mozart's "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" and three dances from De Falla's "Three-Cornered Hat."

Prokofieff's gigantic stature as a composer has been driven home to Bostonians by Mr. Koussevitsky's repeated featuring of his works on the Boston Symphony programs. His playing of the solo part of the concerto reminded us that an extraordinary pianist he is. Revised in 1923 from an early manuscript, it is full of terribly difficult passagework, requiring consummate virtuosity.

Prokofieff plays it not only brilliantly, but with astonishing ease. His performance has superb clarity, which is enhanced by his percussive treatment of the instrument, both in writing for it and playing at it. The composition itself, which is being heard here for the first time, is good to hear. The form is almost strictly classical and even themes suggest Liszt and Berlioz. But the harmonic treatment is modern. The development of the various movements is the work of an outstanding musician.

The composer received, at the matinee, a greeting of marked enthusiasm which stretched itself out for many minutes.

LOVEJOY by BEATRICE BURTON

GREATER BOSTON NEWS | BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN | 2D SECTION

BOSTON, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1930

NEW TELETYPE LINES FROM HUB SAFEGUARD FLIERS

Rapid Transit Lines Extensions Urged by El Board

A Wonderful Love Story by Author of 'Hollywood Girl,' 'Easy,'

What Has Happened Before

Tom Nicholson and his young and beautiful wife are happy with their baby and tiny bungalow until wealthy neighbors, the Aldersons, come into their lives. Mrs. Alderson, whose husband is elderly, has an affair with a man named Jack. Lovejoy takes Tom to a card party at the Aldersons. Norris Shane comes to look after the baby. Lovejoy is amused to discover Norris's fondness for Tom. Steve Ogilvie, Lovejoy's former sweetheart, is present. When Tom receives attention from another girl, Lovejoy is furious. Going out with Steve, she asks him to kiss her. She wants to get even with Tom. Next morning mutual recrimination takes place. Tom compliments Norris Shane on her appearance. Lovejoy is peeved. She hires a maid in spite of Tom's objections. Then daily letters arrive. They are for Mrs. Alderson, but Lovejoy has agreed to receive them for her.

Now Go On With the Story

CHAPTER 20

A FINE misty rain was coming down when Lovejoy turned into Bullard st. that Saturday night.

The wet black sidewalks reflected the lighted windows of the neat modest houses that lined the street. A smell of spring—sharp and sweet and fresh—mingled with the smell of the rain.

The night seemed very peaceful and quiet to Lovejoy as she stopped Tom's car in front of the tall apartment house that had been home to her for so many years.

She turned off the engine and leaned back against the leather cushions to wait for Steve Ogilvie.

It was 15 minutes before 8. She would have time to smoke a cigarette, inhaling the smoke the way Aline did.

You don't get any kick out of a cigarette unless you draw the smoke into your lungs, Aline had told her and she had shown her how to do it.

Aline . . . Could there really be women like Aline, Lovejoy suddenly asked herself.

Aline and cigarette-smoking and secret love affairs seemed as unreal as a dream all at once to Lovejoy as she sat there in common everyday Bullard st., looking up at Aunt Em's front windows with their curtains of much-mended lace.

There was something so decent and honest about Bullard st.

It knew nothing of baguette diamonds and silk-damask pajamas and perfumed cigarettes like Aline's. And if there were any cheating wives there, Lovejoy never had heard of them.

What on earth am I doing here, anyway? she asked herself.

It came over her, like a flash, that she was no better than Aline!

Here I sit—waiting for Steve Ogilvie! she thought. Keeping a date with him—planning to spend the evening with him!

For a second she despised herself for what she was doing.

For a second she was seized with a strong impulse to turn Tom's car around and dash back home in it—back to the safety and decency of the little house in Skillings lane.

But just then, before she had time to do any more straight thinking, a great chased car flashed past her and stopped at the curb just ahead of her Steve's car.

Steve was jumping out of it and coming through the rain and coming through the rain, the tip of his cigarette glowing in the darkness.

"Hello," he said as he opened the door of her car. "Move over and make room beside you. What's worrying you?"

"Worrying me?" Lovejoy's eyes were widened against the darkness. "Why, what do you mean?"

"You said you wanted to see me about something," Steve reminded her. "Your voice sounded as if you were worried—in trouble."

Lovejoy shook her head.

"No. I just wanted to see you, Steve," she answered quietly. "I just felt as if I had to see you."

If she had told him the truth she would have said—

I was peeved because Tom left me alone and went to play poker. What I want is some excitement. I want to go places and see things! And almost any man would do as a companion for me tonight—now I happened to know you, so I telephoned you!

But women seldom tell the truth to men who are in love with them. They are much more likely to flatter them—to "string them along."

And that is what Lovejoy did.

"It suddenly came over me that it would be fun to meet you somewhere and spend the evening with you," she said, "the way we used to."

"Remember the wonderful dinners we used to have, Steve?" she went on. "Nobody ever could order a dinner the way you can. I haven't had anything to eat yet tonight, have you?"

He shook his head. "No, and I'm not going to take you anywhere for dinner," he said flatly. "I'm not going to do anything that's going to blacken your reputation, Lovejoy. I'm not going to do any sneaking and I'm not going to let you do any."

She could hardly believe her ears.

"When you called me up tonight," he said, "I thought you were going to tell me that you were leaving your husband. I don't know why I thought that—unless it was because you asked me to meet you here where you used to

AEROLOGICAL TELETYPES AID FLIERS

New Lines Opened Between Boston, Virginia and Ohio Complete the Network

Additional safeguards for airmail and transport pilots were revealed today with announcement by the government that teletype lines have been opened between Boston, Richmond, Va., and Cleveland, O.

These lines connect with the aerological bureau at the Boston airport, of which A. D. Ross is in charge, and complete a country-wide network which it is hoped will eliminate further transport plane crashes.

In consequence, instantaneous weather service is now available all over the country, relayed to pilots by radio while they are in the air.

Through Richmond, all points in the South can be reached, and all points west through Cleveland.

Mr. Ross announced that two additional teletype machines have been added to the Boston equipment, one to be held in reserve, and the other connecting directly with Newark, Richmond and Cleveland.

On the Boston-New York airways, cut-in stations are being erected at Stafford Springs, Hartford and Bethany, Ct., White Plains, N. Y.; Newark and Hadley airports, and Mitchel field, L. I. A cut-in station is also being installed at Washington.

Used in conjunction with the radio beam and radio telephone, it is expected that the teletype service will remove the last hazards from the airmail routes.

KAROLYI SEES NEW WORLD WAR NEAR

Declares the Fascismo Movement Is a Menace to World Peace

Another world war is imminent, according to Count Karolyi, former premier of Hungary, interviewed today at the Ritz Carlton.

The count, who is to lecture tomorrow at Ford Hall on "Fascismo, the Menace to World Peace," declared that war threatens as long as "Fascist sympathizers continue rattling their swords and shaking their fists."

He declared that war between a united Italy and Hungary against the small neighboring states is the dream of Fascist Italy, and that the League of Nations is no more than a league of governments and political parties.

He said their weapon of economic isolation is impossible, and predicted that the Young plan will be dead within two years.

"Another more adequate plan will have to be found to satisfy the needs of Central Europe," he stated.

"The combined economic strength of France, England and America is alone powerful enough to stamp out the growth of Fascist strength," he declared. "In the meantime America faces grave danger from making citizens from Fascist supporters.

"The League of Nations lost its best chance to stamp out Fascism in Europe when it permitted a large loan to Hungary without attaching political conditions." The mistake will become increasingly apparent, he believes.

"Prohibition I heartily support—in theory," declared the Hungarian socialist, "but present enforcement makes it highly objectionable. Of minor importance, prohibition is made a major issue in this country. Anything would be better than the present conditions," he avowed.

INDUSTRY AND TAXPAYERS TO PAY BILL

Would Avoid Putting the Full Load of Expense on Car Riders

Extension of rapid transit lines in Greater Boston, with the cost of such service fairly apportioned among property owners and industry, instead of on the backs of the car riders," is advocated by the public trustees of the Boston Elevated Railway in their annual report to the Legislature, filed today.

If the business of the road is to be increased it must come from extension of rapid service lines in the opinion of the trustees. Lower operating expenses will result, too, the trustees say.

In this connection, the report says:

"The trustees believe that Boston cannot grow industrially as it should, and cannot develop the best social conditions without complete modernization of transportation lines in step with this fast moving age.

WAS A LUXURY

Rapid transit, not many years ago looked upon as a luxury, has become a necessity. It is as vital in the future development of Boston as any other factor relative to growth. The demand for such service does not alone from those who patronize it.

It comes also from property interests and from industry. It is the trustees' conviction that the cost of this service should be fairly apportioned among those who benefit by it. Through operating economies made possible by modern rapid transit the Elevated can meet whatever proportion of these rental charges without menacing the present basis to cost fare and without serious defect.

"It is our strong conviction that savings which can be effected in operating expenses by means of new rapid transit routes and the consolidation of business therefrom will constitute a percentage of the road is to be increased.

INCREASED VALUES

"The trustees believe that car riders should not bear all the expense of subway and tunnel rental. It is their belief that inasmuch as the construction or extension of rapid transit service brings benefit to many others besides the car riders, increased property values, and stimulates business prosperity, that some fair proportion of the rental on the properties used for such service should be met otherwise than by collecting it from the tickets of the men and women who pay their fares to ride on the street cars and trains.

In advocating the further extension of rapid transit lines the trustees say: "About 50,000 persons are using the Dorchester Rapid Transit Extension in each direction to some point beyond Andrew square, while the benefits accruing direct benefit from this extension of rapid transit service.

The trustees emphasize this as highly significant and as eloquent suggestion for the future development and improvement of the rapid transit is accurately reflected in the liberal use of it as soon as it is provided."

The report shows that the total revenue for 1929 exceeded cost of service by $94,072, despite a decrease of $746,524 in gross revenue and an increase of $261,017 in subway and tunnel rentals.

During the previous year the total revenue exceeded cost of service by only $40,061.

The operating expenses for 1929 were $24,024,747, the lowest since 1922. Six million more car miles were operated last year than in 1922. Other expenses such as rent, taxes, etc., brought the total cost of service in 1929 up to $34,002,550. The total receipts for the year were $34,096,625.

LUCAS GRANTED DIVORCE

Ralph E. Lucas of Gloucester, secretary to John Hays Hammond, Jr., was granted a divorce from his wife, Eleanor C., in Essex Probate Court, Salem, on a charge of unfaithfulness with "William H. Eldridge," Boston policeman.

"Eldridge," identified as William H. Delaney, Jr., a Boston patrolman attached to Division 9, was trapped with Mrs. Lucas by her husband and father-in-law in the Lucas home.

Testifying in the divorce trial, Lucas said the trail was inspired by evidence obtained through a dictograph hidden behind a couch, with wires running to a listening post outside.

The 20-year-old wife was in flimsy attire when her husband and father-in-law, armed with revolvers, burst into the house on the night of November 6. Mrs. Lucas collapsed and was too ill to appear when the cases of the couple, charged with a statutory offence, were called in court.

The Fine Points of Art Taught in Hub

A school unique in purpose, founded originally to instruct teachers of drawing in the state, but now giving courses in general costume, and theater design, is the Massachusetts school of art.

Not only are the pupils given classroom instruction in the basic principles underlying all design, but they must spend a six weeks' period of apprenticeship in some New York gown shop or theatrical costuming establishment.

They are not sent out to do this field work until they have completed the major portion of their work and chosen the field in which they wish to specialize. Classroom work is done from real models, furnished to the school by one of the large department stores. The students are taught to interpret clothes from the standpoint of needs for actual occasion. They must also be able to drape a dress on a model in a few moments from uncut lengths of cloth.

The school is the only one of its kind in this country or any other, endowed by the state for art teaching. It was started to meet the demand of state art teachers in the public schools, who found no institution in this country to which they could go for instruction.

As drawing has been required in the public schools of this state by law for many years, those who wished to prepare themselves to teach must spend two or three years abroad studying in foreign schools.

By BILL GRIMES

IN their first appearance at home in a fortnight, the Tigers will play the New Haven Eagles tonight at the Boston Garden.

The Tigers have not been winning as regularly this year as they did in former seasons. In the past the Tigers were outstandingly strong defensively with only an average of offense. The reverse is true this year. The Tigers have been the highest scorers since the start of the season, but they have also had more goals scored against them than any other team in the league.

Bill Grimes

The failure of the Tiger defense to hold up is directly responsible for the Can-Am champions' present standing in the league, fourth place. The Tigers are a game and one-half behind New Haven, and Manager Eddie Powers is banking heavily on his men coming through with a victory tonight.

REGAN TO START

Bill Regan will start his first game for the Tigers tonight against the Eagles. Regan has been held in reserve all year, but Manager Powers believes that the young star has acquired enough experience to entitle him to a regular berth. Regan will pair up with Reg Mackey on the outer defense, with Eddie Ontiman and Ponzi Conant doing relief duty.

Bill Regan caged the goal that gave the Tigers their first victory in six weeks last Sunday over New Haven. He has been developing rapidly under Eddie Powers, and is now the best prospect the Hoosier club has had since Dit Clapper was wearing the orange and black.

Incidentally, this will be Regan's only season in the Can-Am League for he will either be sold or drafted at the close of the year.

Although the Tigers have been practically a .500 club since they trounced New Haven last Sunday, the workouts have been light for most of the players as Coach Ware and Tank Boyd, who, for two weeks, have been showing the effects of their hard work, have had a complete rest this week.

Waite and Boyd were ordered to do nothing but skate and were barred from all scrimmage. Reg Mackey is another who has been taking things easy since Sunday.

TIGERS IN FINE SHAPE

As a result of their layoff, the Tigers are all in fine condition and feel that they have shaken off the jinx which has been following them for weeks and are set to step back into the midst of the battle for Can-Am honors.

Manager Eddie Powers will start his first line, Johnny Loucks, Deacon Waite and Yank Boyd with Clark Heyd, Reg Mackey and Eddie Burke as replacements. Johnny Loucks was the hero during the Springfield-New Haven trip, with four goals, and if the Calgary winger is able to break through with his share of 'the fat' he will make a decided difference in the Tiger attack.

Waite and Boyd are real scorers and with Loucks causing the red light to flash at regular intervals the enemy defenses will not be able to devote so much time to Waite and Boyd, fearing to have Loucks uncovered.

Although they are still shorthanded the Eagles are putting up a courageous fight to stay up in the race. They have been forced to

New Type of Craft on Display at Garden

FOR the man who will not depend upon the vagaries of the winds, there is much to be seen in the line of power craft at the Sports and Boat Show which opens at the Garden next week.

Nothing touches on the display will be in order tomorrow and the water fleet will be anchored for one week at Exposition Hall.

One pattern in advance that the motoring-on water-public will be mostly interested in the small outboard craft. Great strides have been made in recent years in outboard motors, and the latest models will be on display at the Garden. Other fine lines of motor boats will be on hand, their appearance and their silent running bound to enjoy full sway among the spacious walks of the coming of boating season.

HULL and superstructure of nearly all craft are carried out in attractive.

The man who goes to the show with any idea of buying a boat of the coming season will do well to inspect the various displays. Many remarkable improvements have been made in motors, with many notable refinements, both economizing and smoother running, during the past important.

LAST of the Massachusetts Bay organizations to clear decks for the season's activities, the Boston Yacht Club held its annual meeting at Rowes Wharf last Wednesday night, electing William W. Nichols to the office.

Others chosen were: Horace F. Hill, vice commodore; Benjamin P. Kimball, rear commodore; Walter Burgess, secretary and treasurer; John J. Martin, Daniel C. Roberts, Quincy Tucker and Roscoe H. Penn, executive committee; W. H. Middendorf, Oliver Iselin, Edward G. Day, William A. Wheeler, George R. Bridge, William W. Hall and Wendell Burgess, membership committee; Herbert A. Maenner, Reginald S. Wells, Howard Gannett, Edward C. H. Mader, Robert C. Martin, Marquis S. Smith and Frederic L. Woods, regatta committee.

ADDITIONAL evidence of the increasing interest in the soccer sport is the boasting of interest on the small.

Two of the racing classes that for years have provided excellent sport off Marblehead will not be seen in competition this season. These are the R boats and the Class O Alden 35-footers.

Both are similar the 30-footers were leaders at Marblehead for nearly 20 years, while the 35 boats have been raced for a decade.

One new class will be added to the Marblehead programs but it will not in any sense exactly take the place of the two withdrawals. The new class will be the eight-meter sloops built to the international rule. These are nearly as large as the 25 raters in Class Q.

Four boats, from the specifications of Paine, Belknap and Skene, and a Norwegian designer—will introduce the new class. They are being constructed for Commodore Charles P. Curtis, William T. Aldrich, Robert Lesson and J. M. Elliot.

A NEW Sloop will be added to the three North Shore Class "Q" fleet this spring. This is the 42-yet unnamed boat building at Lawley's for Edward M. Abbe from the design of Frank C. Paine.

ONE of the most interesting changes of ownership reported is that which saw the title to the famous Class "I" Shark turned over by Albert Goodhue to George Haskell. Either Mary Haskell, the latter's daughter, or his son, George, will race the boat this season.

RABBIT SIGNS CONTRACT

Walter "Rabbit" Maranville, Braves shortstop, has returned his signed contract, thus crushing all reports that he had become a holdout.

The receipt of Maranville's contract was announced by Secretary Eddie Cunningham, who also announced that Maranville, in a few days will don the help from the field possible," wrote Maranville. "I look for the Braves to have a banner year. All we needed last year was a manager to make us hustle and I know that the Braves have landed such a man in McKechnie."

The Braves seemed greatly pleased as well as relieved with the arrival of the contract.

Wally Gerber Released by Sox

Walter Gerber, for the past two years shortstop of the Boston Red Sox, has been given his unconditional release by the club.

The passing of Gerber on the heels of Ken Williams, who went to the New York Yankees by the waiver route recently, eliminates all veterans from the roster of the Fenway team, which will start the American League season with an outfit of comparatively young players.

TENNIS FINALS AT LONGWOOD

Mrs. John R. Jessup, national women's indoor singles champion of 1924 and 1925, will attempt to win her third title this afternoon when she meets Maurice Palfrey, the 1929 out-of Brookline ales, who has been the feature of his tennis.

Both of these players are about of a and today's match should be a thriller. Mrs. Jessup is in good form and Palfrey is fresh from sport with plenty of time.

Mrs. Jessup won her way to the finals by defeating Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup, Miss Margaret Blake in the semifinal.

Miss Wightman and Sarah Palfrey, the defending champions in the doubles will meet Marjorie Morris and Elizabeth Ryan in the final match of the tournament.

Margaret Blake and Dick Harte won their final round of the mixed doubles by defeating Miss Wightman and George Caller after three sets, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3. In the other half of the semifinal round Maurice Palfrey and Dick Murphy gained the right to compete in the final by defeating Margaret Morrell and John Cragin-hall 6-3, 6-2, 6-4. The final of the mixed doubles will also be played this afternoon.

Scotland Defeats Wales at Soccer

Murrayfield, Edinburgh, Scotland, Feb. 1 (AP).—Scotland today defeated Wales in an international rugby match here by 12 points to 9. International games between the two countries were inaugurated in 1883 and Scotland has now won 21, Wales 18 and 2 were drawn.

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Feb. 1 (AP).—Ireland won today's international soccer match from Wales by 7 goals to 0. In international soccer games since 1882, Wales has won 19, Ireland 15 and 10 were drawn.

Canera Knocks Out Rioux in 46 Seconds

CHICAGO, Feb. 1 (AP)—Primo Carnera, Italy's big muscle man, today was the tentative holder of a 46-second knockout over Elzear Rioux, French-Canadian heavyweight—a conquest which will not become official, nor will the boxers receive any money for their chore, until the Illinois State Boxing Commission is convinced the contest was "genuine."

During the 47 seconds of action in the first round Carnera annexed the French-Canadian to the floor six times the last time leaving him there apparently thoroughly dazed with his chin smeared in the canvas.

HOLD INVESTIGATION

No definite charges of anything wrong were made, but Frederick Gardner, a member of the athletic commission, announced the purpose of both fighters would be held up pending investigation.

After Referee Barry had counted out Rioux, 13,349 spectators at the stadium ticket windows, hoard and hailed folded newspapers and programs into the ring to express their disapproval. Rioux was guaranteed $2000, while Carnera's cut amounted to about $17,000.

Rioux sported the Dallas Goliath 62½ pounds, and appeared to be extremely nervous as he entered the ring. Primo opened up with a left hook that shook Rioux. Rioux took a count of one on a right to the head; the next block, a left to the back of Elzear's head, sent him sprawling between Carnera's feet.

Three vicious looking rights accounted for three more bounces by Rioux before a final right finished him.

Rioux did not land a punch during the brief encounter and did not even attempt to land one.

Both Carnera and his manager, Leon Gee, were vehemently indignant at the action of Commissioner Gardner.

The huge Italian stormed about his dressing room and through his interpreter gave his version of the fight.

"I hit him first on the nose with a straight left," he said in mingled French and Italian. "

SPLIT HIS GLOVE.

"My second blow was a straight right which landed on the temple and split my glove. The third now was to the shoulder and the fourth struck my opponent on his chin. It was my first blow that stunned him and he could not raise his arms except to try to defend himself."

Gee declared that the connection of Abe Attell, former featherweight champion, with Carnera's retirement, had no significance except that he was a boxing instructor. Attell's association with the party previously had been questioned.

The semifinal bout between Tony Tut of Minneapolis and Bruce Flowers, New Rochelle, N. Y., heavyweight, went the route and resulted in a decision for the rugged Minnesota puncher. He knocked Flowers down twice for counts of nine in the seventh round, but Flowers rallied gamely in the last two rounds to outbox Tut.

ESPINOSA AND SHUTE IN LEAD

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 1.—Demmore Shute, Columbus, O., professional, and Al Espinosa, Chicago, a veteran golf pro, were tied for first place at the end of the final round of the ninth annual Texas open golf tournament.

Each had cards of 68 for the par 71 course.

Two strokes behind the leaders were Tony Manero and Mike Turnesa, each with 70.

One stroke farther back, but still in the running, were Johnnie Golden, Paterson, N. J., O. P. Hart, Wheeling, W. Va., and Ray Mangrum, Los Angeles, each with a standard 71.

Seventy-two was a popular figure for the day, 11 turning in that score. Included in the bracket were such favorites as Horton Smith, Bill Mehlhorn, defending champion; Frank Walsh, Bobby Cruickshank, Ed Dudley and Harry Cooper.

Physician Orders Marsters to Quit

Hanover, N. H., Feb. 1.—Al Marsters has hung up his Dartmouth basketball uniform and is no longer a candidate for the team. Despite the fact that he showed enough ability at the game to cause Dolly Stark to regard his efforts seriously, an edict from Dr John Gile, his physician, caused him to abandon the sport.

Dr Gile indicated that while Marsters has shown no permanent effects from his football injuries it would be just as well for him to forego athletics for the time being.

Shucco Knocks Out Sample in 2nd

Rutland, Vt. Feb. 1.—Tony Shucco of Boston knocked out Milt Sample of Adams in the second round of a scheduled 10-round bout here.

12500 BOWLERS IN TOURNEY

Cleveland, Feb. 1 (AP)—Toppers of the ample numbering around 12,500 and representing about 250 cities, will participate in the 30th annual American bowling congress here March 1 to April 6, it was announced today as preparations to close the entry lists tonight.

Cleveland is expected to make good its pledge of 1600 booster teams by tonight, while more than 1500 teams comprising the best in bowling have been entered from over the United States and Canada.

All of the champions crowned last year have announced they will defend their titles. They are the Hub Recreation Five of Joliet, Ill., on the five man team; Butler and Kiecs, of Chicago, in the doubles; Adolph Uske of Milwaukee, in the singles and Otto Stein, Jr., of St. Louis in the all events.

The magnitude of the event is indicated in the paying of entry fees totalling $162,500, of which approximately $100,000 will be distributed in prizes, and the construction of 32 alleys to be in constant use day and night during the six weeks of competition in the public auditorium. Besides prize money, the champions will receive diamond medals.

Bury Cantillon in Boyhood Home

Hickman, Ky., Feb. 1 (AP)—Joe Cantillon, veteran baseball player, umpire, manager and all-around man of the baseball diamond, who died at his home here yesterday, will be buried at his boyhood home in Janesville, Wis., where as a bat boy he first exerted the national game.

The death of Pongo Joe yesterday removed from the baseball world one of the most picturesque figures it had ever known.

From bat boy to player, from player to manager, then on to a scout for the majors and then an umpire, his career was one that carried him to all sections of America and in each place he left hosts of friends. A stroke of paralysis last week held him to his bed and finally resulted in his death.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX GIRL TRIES BOHEMIA

Claire Learns of Mistake When Too Late

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX,
An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

"GREENWICH VILLAGE!" Montparnasse! The Latin Quarter of Paris! Bohemia!

These names suggest romance and allure to many who long to escape on the coast of Bohemia or dwell in that [illegible] clan of uncon[illegible]entionality.

Love freed from responsibility, marriage made very easy or altogether ignored, appeal to the free-and-easy, the uncon[illegible]entional.

To work only when inspired sounds alluring if not noble. To follow the emotions without restraint, not suggest unrestrained happiness. But how does it all work out in actual practice?

Beatrice Fairfax

Like hundreds of other girls, Claire arrived in the great metropolis one crisp autumn day and viewed its jagged sky-line for the first time. Using a small inheritance, she had come to New York from the Middle West to study singing with a view to concert work. For the folks at home thought Claire had a wonderful voice.

Taking the tip of a fellow-student, Claire engaged a hall bedroom in the gray tumbled-down section known as New York's Bohemia. After her first shock at queer odors, doubtful cleanliness and a general air of ramshackle poverty, Claire enjoyed her surroundings. She wished she were part of the gay life she saw in cave-like restaurants of the village and through studio windows.

Then came a masquerade to which Claire was invited. She dressed as a gypsy.

"Meet the girl who sings"

That was Dicky's introduction of Claire to his friend Dick. Dressed as a pirate, and introducing himself to Claire, danced with her, praised her prettiness. He explained that he was an artist an illustrator—a free-lance.

After that there were moonlight rides with Dick on top of the bus, visits in attic studios. And finally Dick "entrew" a party for Claire. She remained in his studio after the guests departed, waiting for him to take her home. But Dick told her how very much he cared, that he was too poor to marry.

"What does money matter?" he pleaded. "What does marriage amount to? We will have each other. Isn't love everything"

As one of her favorite opera, "La Boheme" danced through Claire's imagination—of Musette and Mimi and their love and sacrifices! Dick's plan was beautiful, she decided. He would work hard at his art, she at her singing. And they would love each other.

Too soon Claire learned her mistake. Dick worked when the spirit moved him, which was very seldom. The rest of the time he smoked endless cigarettes, drank black coffee, gambled, went walking to pick up an acquaintance of pretty young girls new to Bohemia.

In broad daylight Dick was not romantic. He had a sallow complexion and poor teeth. He was lazy and selfish and a failure at his work. He lived up to his Bohemian philosophy that love should be free to forget. Despite moments of tenderness, he was a leader eager to live from Claire's sum pocketbook and to get on with as little effort as possible.

Claire soon learned that successful artists work without stint, in season and out of season, and live orderly, successful lives. They put their temperament into their work. Happy lovers, she also concluded, play the game of love fairly, without attempting to cheat each other.

The conventions, she began to realize, are rules of living that the vast majority of mankind have gradually formed and adhered to because the experience of generations proves they make living more comfortable, convenient, beautiful and successful than the long run for everyone. To ignore conventions is like playing tennis without observing any of the rules that govern tennis. You are in that case a failure before you begin.

Bohemia on the surface is a gay butterfly world. In reality it is the abode of blighted promise and tragedy, of lessons learned at fearful cost! The experience of mankind proves that the love and romance as in every other phase of living, hard work and self-control, coordination of mind and emotion are essential to success.

Feeling will not solve a problem of mathematics, nor will emotion guide an automobile. Flaming emotion will not solve your love problem. Your mind, clearly thinking, must guide your feeling if you hope for lasting happiness.

Bohemia may appeal in certain moods because it relaxes the tension of conventional living. But there are constructive ways of relaxing. A fishing trip for a couple of days with pals of similar enthusiasm, in old clothes, roughing it, will do wonders for a man in lazy mood. His wife may find the same needed relaxation though a hike, a good movie, a new hat or a marketing spree. Claire, leaving the children at grandma's.

The conventions are gradually becoming simpler to meet the modern need. The convention of chaperonage, and marriage and divorce laws are slowly being readjusted. But rules there must be if there is to be law, order, progress and success. To follow the rules of the game of love and marriage in the spirit of good sportsmanship

Lindy and Anne [illegible] other sound young people of today, simplified their wedding but were true to the conventions even while they simplified them.

Bohemian romance, ignoring law and order, promises joy but ends in disorder and chaos, like beautiful apples of the Dead Sea, which are said to crumble to dust at the touch.

Nancy Page Quilt Club -:-

THE ALPHABET QUILT—BLOCK 21—THE UMBRELLA

WHEN the club members met to make the twenty-first block in the alphabet quilt they found that "U" stood for an umbrella. "Of course, how stupid of us not to have thought of that." One woman who was a poor speller said she had decided that the "U" block would represent an onion. She was laughed out of court and told to consult her dictionary. "Onion begins with 'O,' silly," said they.

"How are we going to get those drops of rain, Nancy?" "Of course you could use a whole square of polka dot and applique the umbrella onto that but since we have kept all the others plain white gingham I thought we would embroider the dots of rain. We can use satin stitch making tiny white rounds or dots, or we can use French knots. If we use those, I suppose the rain is really hail, however."

Had the club been making this umbrella fifteen years ago they would have chosen black for the top, but in these days of gay color the umbrella may be any shade at all. One member wanted to choose red, but since harsh, strong colors have been omitted entirely in the patterns it was deemed wise to choose some other color for top. Otherwise the red umbrella would stand out in the finished quilt like a sore thumb.

Most of the members chose a violet or lavender color. Nancy's choice was soft rose. That was because she knew about the block that would be next in the rainbow. She did not want to repeat colors. One member chose soft blue, and another a beautiful green.

The six and one-half-inch square of white gingham was cut out, so was the square in the paper. The cloth was held closely over the paper pattern and both pressed against the window pane. With a sharp-pointed lead pencil the pattern was traced onto the cloth. A centre point indicated the spots of rain.

The paper pattern was pasted onto a light-weight piece of cardboard or tagboard and dried under pressure.

While it dried the letter was embroidered in fast color embroidery cotton. Nancy used green to match all her other letters. Then too, she had chosen green, Jonathan, for her connecting strips for the finished quilt.

After the pattern was [illegible] umbrella top was cut out and the handle. The stick was cut in one piece so that it extended from the bottom of the handle to the top. Though [illegible] did not know when the umbrella top was appliqued Nancy found it was easier to [illegible] to cut two pieces.

The stick was cut from a bias piece and was made just twice as wide as the finished stick. The [illegible] were folded under until they met at the center and were then basted in place.

The top was cut with an allowance of a quarter inch on all sides. This was turned under basted in place and then the piece was pressed.

Nancy found that small slits at the edge made it easier to turn the curve at handle and the curve in umbrella top.

The pieces were pinned in place and then basted and later appliqued with fine sewing. Hemming [illegible]

Then the lines were embroidered and another block was ready.

The next Alphabet Quilt Block will be published Wednesday, February 7.

This glycogen is held in the liver for use when the body needs it. The system draws on the liver for glycogen when the food eaten does not contain enough dextrose for its needs. The liver may enlarge or it may become smaller when diseased. There may be an abscess or a tumor in the liver. The liver may degenerate into a fatty condition.

Only the finest quality of ingredients should enter into the preparation of this dessert, the foundation of which is generally, good creamery butter.

Here are a few of my favorite ice box cake recipes

½ lb. sweet chocolate
5 tbsps. water
½ c. butter
3 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla extract
3 c. powdered sugar

Melt the chocolate over hot water, add 2 tbsps. of water and the yolks of the 3 eggs, beating constantly while adding Cream the butter and when the custard mixture is cool, add and continue beating, then add the powdered sugar, beating constantly while adding; stir in the flavoring and lastly the 3 egg whites beaten until stiff. Pour into mold lined with lady fingers. Place in the ice box to chill. This cake should chill at least 24 hours to be at its best. Serve with or thout whipped cream.

FRUIT VELVET CAKE

½ c. of canned sliced peaches
3 c. crushed pineapple
1 eggs
½ c. cup butter
1 c. powdered sugar
1 c. whipping cream
1 doz. lady fingers

Drain peaches and mix with pineapple. Set over water in double boiler. Beat eggs well and add to fruit mixture, stirring constantly until it thickens. Remove from stove and chill. Cream butter and add sugar gradually. When fruit is thoroughly cold, add creamed butter and sugar. Whip cream until stiff and fold into fruit mixture Line mold with wax paper and arrange fruit and sides with lady fingers. Fill center with a layer of the fruit mixture, a layer of the lady fingers, then fruit, and alternate so on with lady fingers to the top. Chill 12 hours. Unmold and garnish with whipped cream and sliced peaches

ICE BOX DESSERT

½ cup butter
1 cup powdered sugar
3 egg whites
½ cup blanched, chopped almonds
1 box macaroon snaps
Whipped cream
Flavor with vanilla or almond extract.

Cream butter with sugar, add egg whites which have been beaten stiff, and beat all together until ingredients are well mixed, then add the almonds and flavoring. Roll the macaroon snaps to fine crumbs. Line a flat dish (8 inches by 9 inches) with the crumbs, then spread with the egg mixture and put a layer of crumbs on top, letting down with a spoon. Mark this into eight servings, making the divisions deep enough so that the crumbs will shake down into the cut edges of the mixture and coat each piece. Set there it is cold until the mixture hardens. Two hours is long enough but the flavors blend more thoroughly if it sets over night. Serve with whipped cream. This is a very rich dessert and therefore the servings may be small.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE

live. But I came because I thought you must have left him. Otherwise I wouldn't have come here at all."

"But what made you think I'd leave Tom?" Lovejoy's voice was small and shaken.

"You told me you weren't happy with him," the man replied.

Lovejoy remembered then that she had told him that. She had told it to him the night of Alice's party, when she had all that Picardi to drink.

"Well, if I had left Tom would you be glad, Steven?" she asked with a long deep sigh.

She moved toward him on the broad seat of the car, and laid her hand on his shoulder.

"Tell me the truth, Steve," she murmured, "would you have me if you could—now? If I left Tom?"

He saw him nod his head with a sudden jerk.

"You know I would," he said, and she knew that he meant it. "But I'm not going to feel around like this with—with another man's wife. It's—its not decent—"

He turned and took her in his arms, as if he couldn't help himself. He bent his head down to hers and kissed her.

At ten o'clock Lovejoy drove back to Stallings Lane. There was a light burning on the little porch of the Bennetts' house next door as she started up her own steps. Mrs. Bennett came out of her house and called to her.

"Mrs. Nicholson!—A special delivery letter came here for you. I sent the boy over to your house with it!" she called shrilly through the silvery whisper of the rain "I didn't see him go in, but I guess your girl got it all right"

She always called Hilda the "girl"

"Thanks," Lovejoy called back as she unlocked the door.

Hilda was asleep in a big chair in the living room.

"I sets in here to listen to the baby—if he wake and cry," she told Lovejoy when she woke up. "He nies by the fire, too"

"There's my special delivery letter?" Lovejoy asked, taking off her wet coat and shaking it before the rosy dying embers. "Where did you put it, Hilda?"

"Letter? No letter came here tonight—for you or for anybody," the girl answered, shaking her flaxen head with emphasis. "Nothing happen—only Mister called up to ask you to send over his check book."

"Mr. Nicholson?" Lovejoy gasped. "Did you tell him I wasn't here?" Her voice was sharp and high like a wire that is worn to the breaking point

"What would I do if Tom found out there I was tonight?" Lovejoy thought flashed through her mind leaving gloom and a kind of fear behind it.

"Sure, I tell him you went out Hilda answered slowly "Then he come home for his check book He look in the garage and see you have gone with his car Then he telephone Aunty to ask if you are there"

"You mean my aunt, Mrs Pomfret, Hilda?" . . . You mustn't call her 'Aunty'."

"Well, anyway, he telephoned her and she tells him you are not there," Hilda's slow, thick voice ran on like a stream of molasses in the winter time "She say she have looked out of the window, but you are not in sight"

She had looked out of the window! Aunt Em had looked out of the window!

"And, of course, she saw my car and Steve's car standing out in front!" thought Lovejoy with a feeling of walls closing in around her.

"There must be a letter here for me, Mrs. Bennett sent a boy here tonight with a special delivery letter for me," she said nervously

"Look in the mail box on the porch, Hilda"

But there was no letter in the box.

"No letter," said Hilda.

Lovejoy remembered afterward that she yawned when she said it—as if she had no earthly interest in that letter or in any other letter.

"I go sleep" she drawled. 'Big day tomorrow I go Scandinavian club tomorrow and have one big time. Good night"

At 12 o'clock Tom came in Propped up against her bed pillows she was pretending to read a magazine Lovejoy heard him unlock the front door

Bridge Between Capital, Labor: the Foreman

National Association Has New Code of Ethics Worth Studying

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, Feb. 1—If you were asked, Who is the key man constituting the bridge between capital and labor, between executives and wage-earners, what would be your reply?

Mine would be The Foreman.

The influence for importance of the foreman is but little understood by many capitalists. Correcting this defect would mean much for the betterment of relations between employers and employed and of national stability.

B. C. Forbes

Did you ever ask a wage-earner whom he is working for? Most, if not most, workmen talk about working for not the corporation or other concern employing them, but for Bill Jones or Tom Smith, or whatever happens to be the name of their foreman. The foreman is their boss. Oftentimes he is the only boss they know even by sight. Still more often is he the only boss they have any dealings with whatsoever. He, and he alone, is the man who, in their eyes, typifies authority, typifies capital. From him alone they get their orders. To him alone they are responsible.

You can see, therefore, how vital it is to have the right type of man as foreman.

American foremen collectively have to do with molding sentiment among the rank and file of the people and families of the country. The politicians, the editorial writers or preachers or teachers or labor union leaders or any other class.

Training schools for foremen should constitute an outstanding feature of American industrial and economic life. And they will by and by.

E. H. Tingley, Boston, secretary of the National Association of Foremen, and editor of the Foreman's Magazine, writes: "I am enclosing 'A Code of Ethics for Foremen,' which has been prepared by a committee from our association. Few foremen are fully impressed with the real responsibilities and not in many cases recognized by the management. Our association is composed of about 14,000 foremen and executives, scattered all over the United States. We have grown about 2500 in the last six months, which shows that more foremen are realizing their responsibilities and are looking forward to increased education and advancement."

The opinion of such a nation-wide organization deserves recognition and consideration by employers, executives, foremen and workers alike. I provide:

"1—The foreman should recognize that every man above, beside or below him has inherent rights to do good work and to be a useful and respected citizen. He should not assume that any man is going to do anything less than his best until he has considered every other possible motive.

"2—The foreman should keep an open mind on all subjects, striving to maintain a broad and balanced outlook, and being always willing to recognize merit in another's ideas.

"3—The foreman should deal fairly with the management, the men and other foremen, accepting responsibility for his own mistakes and refraining from shifting blame to others.

"4—The foreman should strive to understand the principles of business which make for success or failure of industry. He should put, at least some of the fundamentals of business principles, along to foremen, so they can see their own relation to the general scheme.

"5—The foreman should keep informed as to the latest developments in equipment and processes. He should recommend or put into effect such methods as will produce improved quality, lower costs for the product and better working conditions.

"6—The foreman should regard his profession as a field of public service offering an opportunity to help working people obtain maximum satisfaction from life.

"7—The foreman should endeavor to earn, and carefully guard, a reputation for good moral character, good citizenship and common honesty and to support and promote the uplifting influences of the community."

* * *

Doesn't that strike you as eminently sound?

Hosiery Mills Have New High Record Earning Figures

Chicago, Feb. 1—Annual report of the Rollins Hosiery Mills, Inc., covering the 54 weeks ended January 1, 1930, shows the largest sales and earnings in the history of the corporation and its predecessor. Net income for the period amounted to $450,530 as compared with $421,568 for the 52 weeks ended December 22, 1928.

Net sales last year totaled $5,215,520 against $4,893,730 the preceding year.

TIRE OUTPUT IS TO EQUAL LAST YEAR'S

Leaders in the automobile tire industry forecast an output of between 71,000,000 and 71,250,000 tires in 1930, as compared with about 71,000,000 in 1929 and a peak of some 72,000,000 in 1928, thus indicating the expected return to an immediate production like that of 1928 as compared with 1929, of same with the cars and trucks will assume a reduction in the rate of annual equipment sales of around 4,000,000 units, says the Standard Statistics Company, of New York, in a current survey of the tire and rubber industry. The survey continues in part:

"Offsetting this downward trend, the demand for new tires for replacement purposes will increase, but the increase will be little more than sufficient to balance the loss in requirements from automobile scrappage. The net result for the industry as a whole, not only will prevent a material trade expansion for 1930 as a whole, but for the greater part of the year production, output and sales will be held down to levels below those witnessed in 1928."

January Building Nearly Equals 1929

Building contracts slumped badly in the first quarter of 1929 but for the first half of January were only 94 per cent behind the similar period in 1929, according to the latest business analysis of the Prudential Economic Service, Inc., which adds: "Trading is among the first important industry to feel the stimulus of ease in money. Contracts awarded in first seven or seven working days of January averaged less than 0.1 per cent under the similar period of 1929. This is a big improvement over the last quarter of 1929 when daily averages of awards were 21 per cent under the similar period of 1928. We do not believe this indicates a reversal of trend but it is fair to say that a continuance of easier money should serve to slow up the decline."

Worcester Awards Bonds in Boston

Worcester awarded $2,000,000 Rolling Stock bonds, $100,217; $370,000 trunk sewer loan payable July, 1930 to 1939, and $200,000 water loan, payable July, 1930 to 1939, all bearing a rate of 4½ per cent for 1930 to 1933 maturities and 4 per cent for 1934 to 1939. Other bidders were: R. L. Day & Co., $100,199; Harris, Forbes & Co., 100.17; Merchants' National Bank of Boston, 100.09, and Estabrook & Co., 100.01.

Canada Dry Sales Show an Increase

New York, Feb. 1—The sales of Canada Dry Ginger Ale, Inc., for December Quarter were $2,792,576, against $2,343,230 in the same period of 1928. In the latter period sales included sales of Canadian Canada Dry Company, subsidiary company, bottle and box deposits. If these three items were deducted sales for the December quarter would exceed those of 1928 by $4164.

AT THE DIAL

By THE RADIO EDITOR

MUSIC appreciation by the rising generation looks hopeful, and the radio is doing its share in fostering this laudable spirit. Radio's good work in raising the taste of our youngsters in matters melodic is not being done in the evening hours of interminable jazz. It is progressing in intelligent and interesting manner through a course of week-by-week broadcasts conducted by a master pedagogue, Walter Damrosch.

WE are told that millions of radio listeners are brought into assembly halls throughout the land each Friday morning to listen to Damrosch's musically illustrated lectures. If such is the fact, the schools are giving their pupils something of great value and something which will remain with them through all their days. When the great orchestra director takes up an imposing bit like the Ride of the Valkyrs from Wagner's "Die Walkuere" or Serta's melody from "The Flying Dutchman," he plants in the souls and in the minds of his hearers something real and something vital.

DAMROSCH has a special gift for making clear the functions of all his orchestral instruments, and the significances of the interwoven phrases of his program numbers. What child will ever again listen with indifference to a mighty symphony movement which has once been dissected, and explained, and then played for him by such a teacher?

FOLLOWERS of Walter Damrosch will be able to tune in on an interesting program of his tonight during the General Electric Hour on the Red Network at 9 o'clock. Several works of John Alden Carpenter are to be heard, including a movement from his sonata for violin and piano. The program is as follows: Scherzo, from "Midsummer Night's Dream" (Mendelssohn), Waltz (Schubert), Adventure in a Perambulator (Carpenter), Slow Movement from "Sonata for Violin and Piano" (Carpenter), Allegretto, from "Symphony No. 2" (Brahms), Phaeton (Saint-Saens).

GRAND OPERA enthusiasts will be able to hear snatches of Donizetti's tuneful "Lucia di Lammermoor" broadcast from the stage of Chicago's new opera house. The portion of the opera which goes on the air includes part of Scene 1, and all of Scene 2, Act 2, and Scene 1 of Act 3. The connections between 9 and 11 tonight through WBZ, Antonio Cortis will be heard as Edgar, and Florence Macbeth as Lucia. At the end of the opera the company will scramble for trains and head for Boston, where is the final opening of the Chicago season, and the company starts its road tour as soon as the curtain drops on the last act.

JOHN SHEPARD, 3d, will as usual devote a couple of evenings to the broadcasting of entire operas from the local stage in the coming fortnight. In addition, the two Wednesday matinee performances will go on the air through WNAC. The first matinee broadcast will be "Faust," followed by a Saturday night broadcast of "Rigoletto." On the following Wednesday afternoon, radio listeners will be given Wagner's "Tannhaeuser," and on Saturday, February 15, Verdi's "Il Trovatore."

GENEVIEVE IRENE ROWE, soprano, of Worster, O., winner of the third national radio audition of the Atwater Kent Foundation and Armand Tokatyan, tenor, of Alexandria, Egypt, now with the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York, will be heard with the Atwater Kent Concert Orchestra directed by Josef Pasternack, in the Atwater Kent Hour tonight at 9:15 p. m. The program is as follows:

March, from Tannhauser (Wagner), orchestra; Aria: Rachel Quand du Seigneur, from La Juive (Halevy), Mr. Tokatyan with orchestra; At the Well (Hageman), In the Luxembourg Gardens (Manning); Spring Fancy (Densmore), Miss Rowe with piano; In Cabaret, from Alsatian Scenes (Massenet), orchestra; Aria: Je Crois Entendre Encore, from The Pearl Fishers (Bizet), Mr. Tokatyan with orchestra; Mattinata (Leoncavallo), Mr. Tokatyan with piano; Dance of the Blessed Spirits, from Orpheus (Gluck), orchestra; Shadow Song, from Dinorah (Meyerbeer), Miss Rowe with orchestra; Londonderry Air, (Air by Percy Grainger), orchestra; Quierene Mucho (Bog), Los Besos Serenata (Leoncavallo), Mr. Tokatyan with orchestra; The Rose Waltz (first performance) (Cimara), Mr. Tokatyan with piano; Dance of the Comedians, from The Partered Bride (Smetana), orchestra; Flower Song, from Carmen (Bizet), Mr. Tokatyan with orchestra.

'EXILE' TOO ILL TO COME BACK

Chicago, Feb. 1 (INS)—Even though there may no longer be any Peppy Girlie Revue at the Parkway Ballroom, owned by Peppy O'Neil, president of the Peppy Oil Company who says he pleads guilty to selling oil in violation of the Volstead act, Peppy is confident that he will go back.

"I have had my name 'on the line' for a long time and I have always come through. I have financial backing so badly I can hardly refuse."

The theatrical magnate was shooting up an arm, groin and head and was under the influence of morphine when he was arrested last night, but it doesn't bother him much, he declared.

"I do not know whether I would be allowed to return to the Parkway Ballroom or not. I might, but it doesn't matter much to me for the present.

Peppy Girlie Revue Feature at Oasis

Harry Hong, manager of Boston's newest Chinese-American restaurant, the Oasis, at 16 Winchester pl., announced today that he has signed up to headline the entertainment at the restaurant's opening on Thursday, February 6, Vincent De Nunzio and his Oasis Society Orchestra.

Vincent De Nunzio

Whoever the management may decide on, it will be quite a novelty to have a Chinese restaurant featuring a Spanish orchestra, and the fact that the Oasis is making an appeal to the Spanish people in the vicinity as well as the Chinese is taking advantage of the popular preference for Spanish music during the dinner hour.

Vincent De Nunzio and his Oasis Society Orchestra have won the instant favor of the patrons, and add much to the entertainment in the beautiful dining room. One of the best and peppiest girlie revues seen for a long time in Boston is being presented this week under the direction of Stanley Wilson, prominent theatrical man. Reasonable prices will prevail during the evening. Guests will be entertained in the evening with a dinner and supper dance. Walter Wong, head waiter, will care for you royally.

"Surprise Week" Announced at Yen Ho

The management of the Yen Ho restaurant at 245 Tremont st. announces that next week will be a "Surprise Week." Many valuable tokens will be presented in lucky pattern and among the surprises for the opening evening will be distributed to each patron on an announced star table. Frankie Mallard, master of ceremonies, will head the list supported by a Chinese-American band, and Lita Ayers, a young Chinese-American girl, will entertain with their feats of dancing and singing. Frankie Mallard and his New York Night Club Orchestra will entertain with many new dance hits and

'Lifers' at Charlestown

They Number—Would You Have Thought It?—One Hundred and Fifty-Three!

EDWARD C. R. BAGLEY of East Boston, once a State Senator, now one of the commissioners of the Department of Correction, talked interestingly to students of the Agricultural College at Amherst.

His subject was "Prisons and Prisoners."

There ARE no black-and-white striped suits in our State Prison, Mr. Bagley said; never have been.

Prisoners do NOT wear their hair closely cropped, that style having passed out 60 years ago.

Nor does the typical prisoner have a pug nose.

But the most surprising feature of Senator Bagley's address had to do with the number of Charlestown inmates who, short of a pardon by the Governor, are there FOR LIFE.

What would you say is THEIR number?

It is 153 and all but one have been put away for taking human life.

Contemplating the fate of THESE men, who will say that they are not punished as adequately as those other slayers whom Death finds in "the chair"?

For Two Cents?

Harvard and the Scrubwomen

DISCHARGE of twenty charwomen, employed at 35 cents an hour for five hours every day in Widener Library, has brought down upon Harvard University a flood of unpleasant publicity.

The story as it reached the public was that, warned by the Minimum Wage Commission, unless these women were paid 37 cents an hour, on and after December 26th, the Commission would advertise the fact, Harvard let them go, on Christmas Eve.

From that day to this, columnists, special writers and the "liberal" magazines have been pounding away at the "wealthiest university in the world"—in addition to its real estate Harvard owns $80,000,000 in gilt-edge stocks and bonds—for saving $12 a week, $624 a year, by the dismissal of twenty poor women.

Now comes a belated explanation from Mr. Arthur L. Endicott, controller of the University. Mr. Endicott, he says, wrote to the Wage Commission last April of a plan to replace the women with men, finding other employment for the former. In October, this change was made, in part, and the Commission was asked for further time. On December 18th, the Commission issued its "peremptory" order.

Mr. Endicott says the women had other employment and so were not dependent upon their work at the University. He declares that none of them had at any time complained about wage or working conditions. He says they were paid on account of sick leave and for vacations; and he reports, finally, that all except two have been "offered other work or given other employment."

That sounds reasonable and as an explanation probably will satisfy all except those who WILL believe the worst.

But it will never overtake and smother the story that the "wealthiest university in the world" fired twenty poor scrubwomen rather than lift their pay 2 cents an hour.

Mr. Hoover Chooses Well

Picks the Son of Our Chief Justice to Be an Assistant Attorney-General

DISPATCHES from Washington which appear to bear the stamp of authenticity report that President Hoover is about to send to the Senate the name of Arthur Belcher Rugg of Worcester to be assistant attorney-general.

Mr. Rugg, district attorney of the County of Worcester, is one of the sons of Arthur Prentiss Rugg, for nearly twenty years the honored Chief Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts.

"The choice of Mr. Rugg," according to one correspondent, "has been approved by Republican leaders in Massachusetts, by Republicans of the Massachusetts delegation in Congress and by Attorney-General Mitchell."

The President may also learn, upon inquiry, that while the younger Rugg is not widely known beyond the borders of his county, his call to service at the nation's capital is gratifying to all the people of Massachusetts. Regarding the Chief Justice as they do, his fellow-citizens are confident that his son will capably perform the duties of his new post.

Real Bullets Needed

By NELSON HARDING

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

THE proposal to place ten thousand armed guards on the Canadian border is a good one if you think so.

This army of amendment sharpshooters will preserve law and order on the most peaceful border in the world.

Each man will be armed with a machine gun and a rifle. Why not give him a pair of boxing gloves also?

An internal revenue dragoon armed with an automatic arsenal is no match for an American tourist equipped with a pint flask of liquid flame.

Canada need not fear that our proposed expeditionary force of ten thousand trigger mechanics is a violation of international good will.

We have been friends with the Maple Leafs for centuries. Canada has got what we want and we want it. Why should we steam up a quarrel with a hospitable neighbor who owns an orchard of bolsheviki in which every bloom is a red flame?

The charge of the gallant ten thousand will be directed against the itinerant American tourist who strays from the roped and narrow gangway of liberty and tries to join the thundering herd of mercantile slaves who can still do as they so desire.

This army is a flattering imitation of the Royal Northwest Mounted and will be called the Imperial Southeast Gendarmes with winter underwear.

The border will be a new picnic grounds for embalmers. Everybody knows that a staggering tourist is a difficult target. The machine gun will come in handy in case of a tie.

The good American who used to go to Paris to die can now save a lot of carfare.

Having voted for President Hoover we stand on our rights as a citizen of most states and demand an identification tag. We are hoping to motor to Canada this summer.

But it seems that the only safe way to leave this country is to be deported.

You can attain the rank of brigadier-general with one drink. That entitles you to review the new army.

The man who takes a drink is a traitor to an amendment. The man who snoops on him is a spy to personal liberty. We certainly are baiting the mouse-trap of history with a fine lot of cheese.

We have no real objection to that army of ten thousand on the border provided that they don't give 'em a bugler.

H. G. Wells Writes on

"The Science of Life"

In Collaboration With

Prof. Julian Huxley and Geo. P. Wells

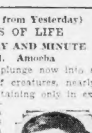
FORMS OF LIFE

THE LOWLY AND MINUTE

Sec. I. Amoeba

WE must plunge now into a world of creatures, nearly all minute, attaining only in exceptional instances such dimensions as to be seen with it is a naked eye.

It is a strange and exciting world. Its existence was hardly suspected until the 17th century, when Antony Van Leeuwenhoek, a Dutch draper, through lenses of his own making, saw drops of water and bits of cheese and the scrapings of his own teeth—indeed at anything he could lay his hands on—and beheld for the first time their curious inhabitants.



H. G. Wells

An enormous and vitally important branch of biological science has sprung from these observations.

Nowadays everybody has heard of "microbes," tiny insidious creatures, populating the earth with unseen multitudes. Because of their minuteness the smallest drop of water is a habitable world for them, and a few particles of decaying organic matter are enough to support a thriving microbe population.

They swarm in pools and puddles, in the moisture of the soil, in the moisture that clings to mosses and other plants. Their spores float everywhere in the air. If a few blades of straw or a little pepper or some other organic substance be added to water, and if it be left in a glass, it will be found in a few days to be teeming with these tiny creatures.

Moreover, their species may attain to inconceivably vast numbers.

The number of men in the world today is about seventeen hundred millions, and the number of individuals in most species of the larger mammals are probably lower than this.

But microbes attain numbers almost beyond estimation, numbers that make such figures as these negligibly small.

The green color of stagnant ponds is due to microscopic organisms, individually too small to be visible; the color of the Red Sea is due to untold myriads of microscopic plants, "making the green one red."

There are microbes which invade our bodies and rack us with a variety of disease, there are others which are not enemies but indispensable friends. And aside from its practical importance there is beauty and wonder in the micro-world.

Abundant in the greenish, apparently lifeless scum that accumulates at the bottom of most pond[illegible]ter-butts and the like is the curious, elementary little creature known as Amoeba.

It is a speck of a transparent jelly-like substance, about one-hundredth of an inch long, showing very little organization.

It is a creature vastly more simple than any that we have hitherto considered. It has no tissues, no definite organs; no heart, no brain, no stomach, no kidneys, no bones.

Except for two special structures that will be considered in a moment, it is nothing but a spot of jelly without enduring form—but a jelly that lives—breathing by absorbing traces of oxygen and giving out traces of carbon dioxide, and moving about and feeding itself in a peculiar and characteristic way.

In this jelly two layers may be discerned, a comparatively opaque and very granular inner layer and a perfectly transparent outer layer, more solid in consistency than the inner.

This layering is not permanent; the substance of the two layers mingle and are turned into each other.

The creature moves by the contraction of the outer layer, which slowly squeezes in at the sides and back, and forces the inner layer forward, so that as we watch the granules may be seen to stream along in the direction of the arrow in the figure.

When it gets to the front end the inner layer becomes converted into the outer layer, and when it gets to the back the outer layer is absorbed into the inner layer, so that as the animal proceeds it is constantly being urged forward by the contracting outer layer. It crawls, so to speak, by being everlastingly squeezed out of its skin.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

BEHOLD, my Daughter, upon New Year's Day, a man of Babylon vowed a vow and took oath solemnly, saying: "Never again shall liquor touch my lips! For all the stuff is BAD, and I am through with it!"

Yet, a fortnight had not passed, when I met him upon the highway. And he was on his way to a Speakeasy.

And I questioned him, saying, "Alas, for what reason dost thou DO this thing?"

And he answered me, sadly saying, "Madam, what reason would'st thou prefer? For I can give thee 57 varieties of reasons, and each one good!

"Verily, verily, the reasons for which a man taketh a drink are as the leaves of the trees, and the daisies of the field, innumerable!

"Lo, he taketh a drink, when he is sorrowful and cast down, in order that he may forget his sorrow and drown his troubles.

"And he taketh a drink when his heart is glad and he is full of rejoicing in order to 'celebrate' his joy.

"When he is lonely and without friends, he taketh a drink to cheer him and comfort his heart.

"And when he is merry and among his friends, he taketh a drink in order to be a 'good fellow.'

"When he hath lost his moneys in the stock market, he taketh a drink to steady his nerves.

"And when he hath won much moneys in the stock market, he taketh another to commemorate his success.

"When he is down upon his luck and without funds, he taketh a drink to forget his poverty and to give him the courage to face the world.

"And when he is fortunate and his coffers are full, he taketh a drink because he can afford the best stuff—and why not?

"When he is weary and overworked, he taketh a drink to give him strength for his labors.

"And when he is idle, he taketh a drink because 'there is nothing else to do.'

"Behold, he taketh a drink in order to avoid a cold—and in order to CURE a cold. Because a woman hath refused to marry him—and because a woman hath promised to marry him. Because he is young and full of spirits—and because he is old and needeth a stimulant. Because it is hard to GET—and because it is EASY to get. And, likewise, 'just BECAUSE!'

"Yea, verily, Madam, a man that is thirsty and desireth a drink, and cannot find a REASON for drinking is indeed lacking in wit and resourcefulness! For a woman lacketh 'reason'; but a man can always find a hundred reasons for whatsoever he wisheth to do! SELAH.

The Dope Evil

Legislation Such as Congressman Porter Proposes Will Help to Drive It From America

SOME day the powerful nations that control the world's dope supply may do something real to LIMIT that supply. That's a hope of a more or less remote future.

But IN THE MEANTIME Congressman Stephen Porter of Pennsylvania says that THIS nation can do something NOW to limit the DEMAND for dope in the United States—and that interests most vitally every mother and father, every teacher, every social worker.

This nation furnishes a larger profitable demand for the dope than other nations are willing to supply.

Congressman Porter has introduced into the House of Representatives two bills that would help cut down the dope demand, that would make it much more DIFFICULT for dope pedlars to supply the demand of our million or more addicts, that would SAVE from the terrible dope habit millions of boys and girls who form the FUTURE MARKET for the international dope ring.

Congressman Porter proposes the establishment of an independent federal narcotic bureau, ADEQUATELY EQUIPPED, to deal with this rising dope menace. In the past the federal fight against contraband narcotics has been poorly financed and, therefore, weak and altogether inadequate.

He proposes in his second bill to establish a closer supervision of the so-called "legitimate" agencies through which dope is distributed in this nation.

Under the terms of this bill physicians, druggists, dentists, manufacturers, and others who are legally entitled to deal in narcotics, would be licensed and the amount of narcotics in which they deal would be rigidly limited.

Limitation of narcotics distributed through "legitimate agencies" is SUPPOSED to be in effect now. But it is really a joke.

It is estimated that 20 tons of opium would meet the legitimate medical and scientific needs of the United States.

But in 1928 the Federal Narcotics Control Board allowed the distribution of 70 tons of opium in this country. Literally HUNDREDS OF TONS were consumed here.

Remember that a few GRAINS of this terribly dangerous stuff will wreck a human life.

Every honest physician, dentist, druggist and dealer would WELCOME a more rigid control of dope distribution in this country.

Every mother and father, every human being who realizes the menace of the dope evil, would welcome it—and welcome the passage of the Porter legislation in Washington.

Thoroughgoing legislation, such as Stephen Porter courageously proposes and thoroughgoing anti-narcotic EDUCATIONAL work, such as the HEARST newspapers have been carrying on for years, will help rid this nation of an evil that drags millions down to death and degradation WORSE than death.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Feb. 1 — Fred Stone's return to the stage is an epic of heroism and unshakable faith. When he crashed to the ground in his first solo flight more than a year and a half ago he was carried to a hospital with the longest list of injuries ever recorded to a single person in medical annals.

He had one entrance in a hundred of recovering, but, so the surgeons said, no chance whatever of returning to the footlights. He was doomed to permanent invalidism. Yet only once during his long convalescence did his indomitable courage falter.

That was when, hobbling about the room on crutches, he saw a pair of his old dancing shoes in an open closet. There was a quaver in his voice when to his wife he observed: "I wonder if I'll ever wear them again?" It was a fleeting doubt and he never mentioned it again.

Stone's "religious conversion" was first paged several years ago as news. As a matter of fact, he has, since youth, been interested in the church. In circus days he was convinced of the power of prayer. To him there was always something more important than life, else why the sun, moon and stars?

His loyalty to his late partner, Dave Montgomery, has been one of the theatrical classics. Montgomery was a mediocre actor, but the billing was always "Montgomery and Stone." It was thus they started out tromping as boys from St. Joseph, Missouri.

Time after time theatrical managers made enormous offers for Stone to drop Montgomery and "go it alone." Montgomery was slight of his work and showing up late at rehearsals. Stone's invariable answer to such suggestions was a firm: "The team is Montgomery and Stone."

His innate modesty is encompassed in the great ambition of his life — the stardom of his daughter Dorothy, which came true. Before the accident in the air took place he was arranging to appear in a play which would herald: "Dorothy Stone—supported by Fred Stone."

Stone is perhaps the most popular actor in the East but his popularity is not geographical. He is deeply beloved in the West, particularly in towns where he lived as a boy — Colorado and Kansas. His father was an itinerant barber and as a result many towns claim the actor as a native. On a junket to California some years ago he stopped off at some of his old home towns. In each there was a parade for Stone. He prepared to greet the populace, but there was no one to greet. Everybody was in the parade.

Fred Stone never rested on single laurel. While other stars, doing the same old thing in the same old way, have twinkled for a time and vanished, Stone has been expressing an actor's greatest asset—versatility. In his various shows he has featured bareback riding, ice skating, trick roping, acrobatics, sharp shooting, knife throwing, wire walking, fuzzling and ventriloquism. He never repeated his routine from one season to another.

The stage could learn a wholesome lesson from Stone's insistence upon cleanliness in the spoken line. Nothing bordering on the vulgar is permitted in situations or dialogue and even slang is taboo. In his contracts is a clause that he is to be the sole censor of anything he thinks will have a tendency to lower the moral tone of his production. Stone's closest confidant is Rex Beach, his brother-in-law.
